Supremacy Is Lost In Mediterranean

Nation Is Irritated by Il Duce's Tactics in the Near East.

By Felix Morley.

London, May 27.—Under leadership that is obviously confused and irresolute, England today looks across the North Sea to Nazi Germany and waits, with a fatalism that is unusual for this country, for the opening of the next act in the tense European drama.

The sense of frustration following the Italian conquest of Ethiopia has brought a lull in domestic politics. Premier Baldwin's rearmament program, for instance, is meeting with no opposition from the Labor Party, despite its traditionally pacifist attitude. Any recriminations against Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden for the failure of sanctions to stop Italy come from supporters rather than opponents of the government. But this internal harmony only thinly veils the absence of any positive foreign policy at an extremely dangerous moment in British history.

On the issue of continuing sanctions against Italy there is not so much dispute as there is indecision. Because the penalties are already in force they seem likely to continue for some time to come. This likelihood is strengthened by the indications that the Popular Front government headed by Leon Blum, which is soon to take office in France, will favor the maintenance of sanctions in the hope that a negotiated Ethiopian peace can replace that imposed by Mussolini. On the other hand, it is being fully recognized that triumphant Italy does not plan to accept sanctions passively.

Rule of Mediterranean Has Come to End.

Mussolini has several weapons he can use to strike back against protracted British refusal to recognize incorporation of Ethiopia in the Italian empire. The most obvious of these is the fomentation of trouble in Egypt and Palestine. In both instances partial responsibility for the recent disorders in those countries is being freely attributed to the work of Italian agents. But a curious development is that the British government, aside from perfunctory protests, acquiesces almost weakly to these pinpricks. It is even admitted privately here that Britain's traditional supremacy in the Mediterranean is at an end and that the route to India must henceforth be visualized as around the Cape of Good Hope until aviation developments permit direct overland contacts between the various parts of the British empire.

Naturally this defeatist attitude is accompanied by a keen sense of irritation. It is argued not merely that Great Britain made a mistake in failing to apply more drastic sanctions against Italy earlier but also that the necessity of co-operating with the League of Nations prevented London from acting with sufficient energy to protect imperial interests.

Americans who are accustomed to the charge that the British support collective action purely for selfish reasons find this argument curious. It is none the less true that the League nations are criticized here for tending to restrain Great Britain from acting with speed and resolution in her own behalf.

Policy Still Is Based On League Security.

It may be said with certainty, however, that so long as Anthony Eden remains Foreign Secretary the League of Nations will continue to be the focal point of British policy, and what is more, Eden will have the support of all parties except a section of his own in opposing all efforts to water down the League Covenant and weaken the League. At the next meeting of the League Council, which is scheduled to be held June 16, Eden expects to argue forcibly against any changes which would make it impossible to apply sanctions against any future aggressor. British policy is still based upon the idea of collective security even though, at the moment, the faith in the efficacy of this program is very much shaken by the Italian triumph and even though the need

Raid Here Planned By Future Veterans

Princeton, N. J., May 27 (AP).—The Veterans of Future Wars today issued 250 formal invitations to a "Treasury raid and bonus disbursement" to be held in Washington June 15, the day of the payment of the veterans' bonus.

Recipients of the engraved, hand-addressed invitations include President Roosevelt and his Cabinet, outstanding members of Congress and both major political parties and the President and trustees of Yale, Harvard and Princeton Universities. James E. Van Zandt, national commander of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, and Ray Murphy, national commander of the American Legion.

Nazis Cite 276 At Monasteries In Moral Purge

Court Sentences One Monk to 8 Years for Offense Against Youth.

By the Associated Press.

Coblenz, Germany, May 27.—More than half of the 500 Franciscan friars in 20 monasteries in Germany were under indictment tonight for immoral acts, government officials announced.

The disclosure came on the heels of the first convictions, which sent Friar Peter Steinhoff, 46, to the penitentiary for eight years and deprived him of citizenship rights for ten years.

Wilhelm Schroeder, 28, a neophyte, was sentenced to five months in jail, and two youths, 18 and 19, to two and four months, respectively.

The friars are charged with committing abnormal acts with male minors entrusted to their care.

"What we are particularly concerned about in judging the present first of the series of cases affecting members of the Franciscan order," said Presiding Judge von Koolwyk, "is the fact Leovigill (Steinhoff's brotherhood name) committed the most serious crimes against German youths whose interest it is our business to safeguard.

"A special feature of this trial is it involves an ordained priest who is under the protection and garb of his order."

Campaign Was Predicted.

Observers last night recalled that a campaign against the Roman Catholic clergy in Germany, to be based on charges of immorality, had been forecast for some time.

Under the heading, "Be Ready to Scotch the Slander," Our Sunday Visitor, published at Huntington, Ind., recently said such a campaign to discredit the clergy was under way. This referred to an article in America, the Jesuit publication, based on an interview with Prince Hubertus von Loewenstein, of a royal family in Bavaria.

"Hitler hates the Catholic Church as much as he hates Communism," the article quoted the prince as saying.

The German government late Tuesday announced it had arranged for a mass trial of no fewer than 276 monks of the Order of St. Francis and the Congregation of the Merciful Brotherhood on the immorality charges.

A semi-official report, released at the same time the announcement was made, meanwhile indicated 61 more had escaped trial only by fleeing to the Netherlands.

The accused belong to the monasteries of Wald Breithbach, Linz Warendorf, Borken Waldnil and Weze. However, the offenses the Government charges they committed are alleged to have taken place in every single settlement maintained by the two orders in Westphalia and the Rhineland. They involved alleged practices between the accused themselves and outsiders, including minor welfare pupils.

It was said yesterday, as all Ger-

Aboard the S. S. Queen Mary, May 27 (AP).—The stately liner, Queen Mary, steamed westward tonight on her maiden voyage to the United States.

With a convoy of planes circling overhead and her path jammed with hundreds of other ships—small by comparison to the gigantic pride of Great Britain—she moved quietly from her dock at Southampton amid the cheers of thousands.

Pigmy speed boats raced alongside the ponderous liner carrying 2,139 passengers and a staff of 1,200.

The ship had been in clear water for little more than an hour and a half before the first lifeboat drill was called. Passengers were summoned on deck from cabins, lounges, bars and tea rooms. There, the formality of the protective organization was quickly completed.

The Queen Mary forged ahead through Cowes Roads, fashionable yachting water, and received salutations from two British warships—the Royal Sovereign and the Repulse—off Portsmouth.

Before her departure at 4:34 p. m., the corridors of the luxurious craft were crowded with passengers, visitors and the crew. Officers directed the final preparations calmly as six tugs panted beside her hull in the harbor.

At 3:45 p. m., the gongs of stewards mingled with the cries of "All ashore that's going ashore" and the gangplanks were pulled in.

With three deep blasts of her siren, the giant liner—Britain's hope for a record Atlantic crossing—was edged away from the dock and the first test had begun.

She picked up speed gradually, and there was little vibration. Aside from hopefulness among the passengers that the ship would attempt to regain the blue ribbon of the North Atlantic for Great Britain the traveler's chief interest apparently lay in how she would act as she gathered speed.

One representative of the liner declared she would not attempt a record on her initial voyage, but

Britain to Rush More Soldiers To Curb Arabs

By the United Press.

Jerusalem, May 27.—The British government tonight decided to rush an additional battalion of troops to Jerusalem from Cairo, as widespread sniping, guerrilla warfare and pillaging were resumed in the Holy Land.

Rioting Arabs burned an orange grove owned by Felix Warburg, of the United States. The grove was situated near Jaffa, center of most of the recent trouble, in which at least 50 persons have been killed.

Arab insurgents and police clashed in a brisk gun battle at Jaffa this evening. Casualties were not announced.

It was reported that the Arabs, without warning, shot at the police from the tops of buildings. Police routed their attackers and reportedly made several arrests.

Another clash between armed Arabs and police was reported on the outskirts of a small Jewish settlement in the Emik Valley.

The government announced that it will recruit additional Jewish police to assist in cleaning up armed bands in the hills around Nablus.

Arab leaders at Nablus and other Arab strongholds threatened to join the general strike movement launched in Jerusalem and Jaffa several weeks ago unless their demands are satisfied by June 1. The Arabs have threatened to prolong the strike until the government bans further Jewish immigration.

Approximately 1,000 Jewish families of Jaffa, hundreds of whose homes have been looted by Arabs, are seeking refuge in Tel Aviv. Jews from other Arab communities also are arriving at Tel Aviv daily.

Auto of Friend Kills Grandson Of Brookhart, 3

Kin of Ex-Senator Leaves Mother and Darts Into Path of Car.

The 3-year-old grandson of former United States Senator Smith W. Brookhart was killed by an automobile yesterday in front of 3209 Highland avenue northwest.

The child, William Walter Brookhart, pulled away from its mother and toddled into the street and into the path of an automobile driven by a close friend of the Brookhart family. The accident occurred as the mother, Mrs. Smith W. Brookhart, jr., was taking the child and his sister, Betty Ann, 5, home from the National Child Research Center at about 4 p. m.

Police said the driver of the car was Mrs. Dorothy W. Ralph, wife of Henry D. Ralph, Washington correspondent for the Chicago Journal of Commerce and other publications, who lives at 4561 Cathedral avenue.

The Brookharts live at 5714 Chevy Chase parkway. Brookhart is an attorney employed by the Securities Exchange Commission. The senior Brookhart was a Senator from Iowa.

Because of their friendship with the Ralphs, the Brookhart family requested police that no action be taken against Mrs. Ralph. Police said the tiny form of the Brookhart boy appeared suddenly in front of the Ralph vehicle and that there was no opportunity to avoid the accident.

An ambulance took the child to Georgetown Hospital where he was pronounced dead of a fractured skull.

Mrs. Ralph, an expectant mother, was said to be in a critical condition from shock and hysteria. Her physicians ordered her admitted to

Jury Weighs Fate Of Woman Slayer

New York, May 27 (U.P.).—A blue-ribbon jury tonight deliberated the fate of John Fiorenza, 24-year-old paroled convict charged with the assault-murder of Nancy Evans Titterton, woman writer.

The upholsterer's helper confessed the crime after a 13-inch piece of cord found under Mrs. Titterton's body led police to his door. His sole defense was insanity.

District Attorney William C. Dodge, in his address to the jury, demanded that Fiorenza be sent to the electric chair. Defense Counsel Henry Klauber's sole argument was that his client was insane, a "dolt," who readily confessed to anything police suggested.

General Sessions Judge C. Nott, jr., charged the jury that it could return any of three verdicts—acquittal, not guilty by reason of insanity, or guilty of murder in the first degree. The latter carries a mandatory death sentence.

Seven Girls Become Restless, 'Flee' District Reformatory

News of the city's first mass jail break in years filtered in yesterday from the National Training School for Girls on Conduit road—the institution from which 80 young women were invited by Mrs. Roosevelt to attend a White House garden party.

It seems that at the witching hour of midnight Monday, seven Negro girls, all of whom had tasted the pleasures of punch, ice cream and cake on the lawn of 1600 Pennsylvania avenue, climbed down a fire escape and left the training school to seek the "more abundant life."

This came after Dr. Carrie Weaver Smith, superintendent, had given the girls a heart-to-heart talk, the gist of which was that she expected them to be better girls because of their chance at being guests of the First Lady.

But after the girls were captured by Seventh Precinct police, an hour after they escaped, it turned out that they weren't really trying to escape and had been good girls after all.

"I think the girls just got restless," said Miss Marion Browne, assistant to Dr. Smith.

"The girls are very sorry for their conduct. They intended to come back and would have except that the police picked them up. I have talked with all of them today and am convinced they had no intention of escaping. They had hoped to be back before their absence was discovered."

Miss Browne said that escape from the school was simple, because under new rules they are no longer locked in their rooms at night and bars have been removed from windows.

U. S. to Seek Record Loan Of 2 Billions

Public Debt, at All-Time High, Will Reach 36 Billions July 1.

By Sidney Olson.

The Nation will be asked to lend the United States Treasury $2,050,000,000 June 15, the largest single peace-time financing operation in history.

Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., who made the announcement yesterday, said he would ask for $1,000,000,000 in new cash and $1,050,000,00 for refunding operations.

The public debt, now at an all-time peak, will sail up another billion dollars. Yesterday's Treasury statement showed the debt at $31,590,742,247.38. The new cash borrowing will make it just $1,000,000,000 higher.

These figures are exclusive of the bonus payments, which amount to $2,300,000,000. This sum, added to the estimated public debt, will shoot the total to approximately $36,000,000,000 by the end of this financial year, July 1.

In addition to the usual Treasury precautions against "padding" of subscriptions to new issues, the Secretary announced that a plan to eliminate "joyriders," who have bid for recent offerings, had been drafted.

This plan, formulated after consultation with the Open Market Committee of the Federal Reserve Board, was made public in a letter from the Secretary to each president of the 12 Federal Reserve Banks.

To Protect Investors.

Its provisions include a boost in the deposit rate of bidders for Government securities. Now 5 per cent, the rate is to become 10 per cent, except for banks. The purpose of the regulations, according to the Secretary, is to provide for an equitable distribution to protect legitimate investors against speculative buyers.

Certification also is required from the Federal Reserve banks that the subscriptions tendered the Treasury through them are made in good faith and that "the bank itself has no beneficial interest therein."

Former precautions included the requirement, that banks restrict their demand for the new issues to amounts not exceeding 50 per cent of their combined capital and surplus. Subscriptions for $5,000 and less usually are given preference.

As usual, the Secretary refrained from making any forecasts about the probable success of the issue. It is well known that he prefers to let the market for the securities speak for him when they are placed on sale—and invariably immediately oversubscribed.

Part Earmarked for Bonus.

Of the huge new borrowing, whose details will be made public June 1, part is earmarked for the bonus and part to cover the year's deficit, which is figured tentatively at $4,000,000,000.

In January the President stated that the budget practically was in balance except for relief. The total of all expenditures was estimated by the President at $5,650,000,000, and total income figured at $5,654,000,000.

Relief was estimated tentatively at $1,103,000,000. The deficit would have totaled a little over $1,000,000,000. This was placed against the enormous depression deficit of $3,989,000,000 in 1934, and the $3,575,000,000 deficit for the 1935 fiscal year.

Since then, passage of the bonus bill, with approximately $1,700,000,000 in payments to the veterans, plus approximately $500,000,000 for the adjusted service certificate fund totaling about $2,300,000,000, added materially to the deficit. Loss of the AAA processing taxes, figured by the President in January at $619,000,000, also shoved the total higher. Estimates of the difference for this year's expenditures and income range from $3,750,000,000 to

Drastic Corporate Tax Drafts Of Treasury Brew Senate Storm

Adjournment on June 6 Imperiled; Form of Bill in Doubt.

By Robert C. Albright.

Backed by the President, the Treasury yesterday laid before a resentful Senate Finance Committee two drastic tax schedules that transcended even the severe House tax bill in their punitive effect on corporate earnings withheld from stockholders.

Dismayed by the maneuver, which ripped wide open the whole question of corporate taxation previously decided to the satisfaction of the committee, conservative Democratic members aired their views freely at an unexpected caucus, and privately reiterated their stand for the committee's own bill.

As the committee met later to consider the schedules, Senator Walter F. George (Democrat), of Georgia, moved approval of rates the group had worked out without White House assistance, embracing an 18 per cent flat corporate income tax, a 7 per cent tax on undivided profits, and a 4 per cent normal income tax on dividends. The motion was left pending when the committee adjourned.

The whole outcome was plunged into uncertainty, as Senators expressed wonder at the Administration's attempt to sway support back to steeply graduated corporate earnings tax rates, after Congress had been given to understand that the President was more interested in

Local Tax Rise, Deficit Hinted In Compromise

By James D. Secrest.

The specter of a substantial increase in the District's $1.50-on-$100 tax rate to make up a deficit of $3,000,000 in the fiscal year 1937 loomed yesterday as Senate conferees on the District supply bill postponed a scheduled conference with the House.

As the Senators prepared to stand firm on the $5,700,000 Federal lump sum payment, District officials estimated that adoption of the "compromise plan" proposed by the House conferees would necessitate a rise in the tax rate, as the local government is barred by law from incurring a deficit.

They pointed out that the District bill, as it passed the House, would bring about a deficit of $2,095,000 and that the Senate had restored slashes in the Budget Bureau estimates and thus increased the total appropriations $1,295,437 above the House figure.

Should the Senate accept the proposal of Representative Thomas L. Blanton, all of the Senate's additions, save the restoration of about $87,000 for character education, would be retained, and the deficit would thus be jumped to at least $3,000,000.

Blanton stated on the House floor that the House managers had agreed to accept 84 of the 87 Senate amendments providing the Senate would adopt three voted by the House, viz., the $2,700,000 lump sum, deletion of character education funds, and the bar against outside work by District employes earning $2,400 a year or more.

If the District bill were to be enacted into law with the Blanton compromise plan incorporated, the commissioners would have no choice but to raise the tax rate—

Inquiry to Ask Action Against Townsend, Aids

Committee Seeks Contempt Order in House for Pension Chief.

The House will be asked today to cite Dr. Francis E. Townsend, originator of the $200-a-month old-age pension plan, and two of his assistants for contempt. At the same time, it will be asked to turn the case over to Leslie J. Garnett, United States district attorney, for prosecution.

The House committee investigating pension plans, after wrangling for more than five days, decided by a vote 6 to 2 to ask the House to cite the doctor, who walked out of a committee hearing and refused to answer questions. Included in the requested citation are the Rev. Clinton Wunder, New York, and John B. Kiefer, Chicago, Townsend district leaders, who refused to appear when subpenaed.

The committee decided not to ask the House to try the pension advocates because a long trial would be certain to delay adjournment. Garnett said that Townsend could not be brought to trial in the District Supreme Court before next fall.

Voting against the resolution to prosecute Townsend and his followers were Representative Tolan (Democrat), California, and Collins (Republican), California. Voting for the citation were Chairman Bell (Democrat), Missouri, and Representatives Lucas (Democrat), Illinois; Gavagan (Democrat), New York; Hollister (Republican), Ohio; Ditter (Republican), Pennsylvania, and Hoffman (Republican), Michigan.

In addition to walking out on the committee, Townsend repeatedly has issued defiant statements and has instructed his subordinates to refuse to respond to subpenas. These actions are expected to be cited in the charges.

The committee, however, failed to bring charges against Sheridan Downey, Townsend's lawyer, who also has failed to respond to a subpena and who continued to issue defiant statements.

One last chance was given the three witnesses yesterday morning when the name of each was called in the committee room. There was no response. Former Senator

Farley's 'Prairie State' Speech Wins 'Silver Tongue' Accolade

Postmaster General James A. Farley last night was given the degree of doctor of oratory and awarded the accolade of "The Silver Tongue."

His new alma mater is the John Russell Young School of Expression, which is composed of newspapermen who travel with the President and who, on various occasions during Presidential jaunts, have been persuaded to make public addresses. The institution of newsmen was holding its first convocation at the Mayflower Hotel.

In handing Farley his diploma, Young, dean of the school as well as dean of the White House pressroom, announced that the honor had been hastened by the Postmaster General's "Prairie State" speech in Jackson, Mich., May 20.

Such a storm of protest from Republicans in the Middle West and the Nation's "bread basket" did Farley's reference to Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas as a "typical Governor of a prairie State" arouse, that echoes still were audible last night.

Even as Farley was getting his degree, Harrison E. Spangler, director of the western division of the Republican National Committee, announced from Chicago that "over 400 Prairie State" Republican clubs had been organized by voters in protest against Farley's remarks.

No. 1 diploma was awarded President Roosevelt at the White House earlier in the day. Although the school has been in existence 22 years, Frederick A. Storm, president of the White House Correspondents Association, said the 18 diplomas handed out last night were the only honors it ever has conferred.

Others who received "sheepskins" included:

George E. Durno, International News Service; Walter J. Trohan, Chicago Tribune; Frederick A. Storm, United Press; John Russell Young, Evening Star; Albert L. Warner, New York Herald-Tribune; Charles W. B. Hurd, New York Times; Frances A. McCaffery, Central News, of London; Edward L. Roddan, Democratic National Committee; Lewis Wood, New York Times; Paul Mallon, North American Newspaper Alliance; John T. Lambert, Universal Service; Oliver Lerch, Wall Street Journal; Frances M. Stephenson, Associated Press; Raymond Ezekiel Henle, Pittsburgh Post-Gazette; C. S. Linkins, Western Union, and George E. O'Connor, honorary member of the White House Correspondents Association.

Hopkins Is Stripped of Power to Distribute $1,425,000,000.

Aid Head Says Sum May Be Inadequate

By Felix Bruner.

Complete responsibility for administration of relief was put in the hands of President Roosevelt in the deficiency bill reported yesterday by the Senate Appropriations Committee. The bill as it passed the House had turned the entire relief appropriation over to Harry L. Hopkins, works progress administrator.

Retaining unchanged the $1,425,000,000 relief fund, the committee eliminated all reference to the Works Progress Administration. The House earmarking of the money for specific purposes was retained with minor changes.

In addition, the bill makes available to the Public Works Administration headed by Secretary Ickes, $250,000,000 for loans and grants for non-Federal works projects. While it specifically saves the PWA, the bill also makes it possible for President Roosevelt to continue the Resettlement Administration, headed by Dr. Rexford G. Tugwell, although the functions of the latter apparently are considerably curtailed.

Consideration of the deficiency bill will begin in the Senate at noon today. The commodity exchange bill, on which the Senate has been working for two days, is expected to be laid aside temporarily.

Similar to 1935 Bill.

The relief section of the bill as approved by the committee resembles the measure passed last year, giving the President $4,880,000,000 to spend with few restrictions. The present bill however, provides that the President may not increase by more than 15 per cent any of the sums earmarked for specific purposes. The increase could be accomplished by transfer from one fund to another. The present law permits the President to transfer up to 20 per cent of the total appropriation to any one of the various relief agencies.

The Senate committee also wrote into the measure another restraining clause, requiring that no money should be spent for a project for which the total amount necessary is not available. This amendment would prevent the starting of such projects as the Florida ship canal and the Passamaquoddy power development, for which additional appropriations have been denied by Congress.

The deficiency bill as reported to the Senate carries a total appropriation of $2,368,580,044, an increase of $4,350,331 over the House appropriation. Among the principal increases were $1,200,000 to the TVA for construction of two dams, and $1,000,000 for salaries and expenses of the Rural Electrification Administration as set up under the Norris bill recently signed by the President.

The bill also includes an item of $35,000 for the expenses of the joint committee on inaugural ceremonies, which will have charge of the inauguration of a President next January. The Interior Department receives an additional $900,000 to carry out the provisions of an act amending the war minerals relief statutes.

The committee was influenced in shifting the appropriation from Hopkins to the President by the recent decision of the District of Columbia Circuit Court of Appeals outlawing some of the acts of the Resettlement Administration as an unwarranted delegation of power. The WPA as well as the Resettlement Administration was created by executive order and not by law. The PWA was set up under the recovery act.

The bill provides that the new relief appropriation, together with unexpended balances of the old appropriation, shall be "used in the discretion and under the direction of the President."

The amounts earmarked, subject

Zionchecks Home, But No Band Plays

Representative Marion Zioncheck and his bride returned to Washington last night after a honeymoon spent in Florida, Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands and the Rockefeller Center pool.

There was no band playing when the inventor of the Zipper (honey-rye-whisky-mint) slipped into town to take up once more the affairs of state.

Early today a report was received at The Washington Post that the Representative's car was seen parked by the House Office Building.

It was believed, as he had been evicted from the apartment at Harvard Hall, that it was altogether within the realm of possibility that he and Mrs. Zioncheck might be bunking at his office for the night. (Members of Congress have been known to do this.)

But this was not the case. A reporter who tarried to the House Office Building arrived just in time to see the Representative pull away in his car, laden down with a bicycle and other impedimenta.

The reporter's driver was asked to "follow" that car." But Zioncheck soon left the pursuing Jehu far behind.

Another Party Not Projected, Says Coughlin

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 27.—The New York Sun today published the following telegram from the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin in answer to the Sun's inquiry as to whether he contemplated a third party:

"I have not been in favor of the New Deal, which to my mind tends toward bureaucracy, dictatorship and extreme Socialism.

"I have constantly advocated the cleansing of capitalism by restoring to the Congress the entire issuance and regulation of all money and credit, the payment to labor of a living annual wage, together with guaranteeing to the farmer production at a profit.

Prefers Doles, He Says.

"These three principles have not been considered favorably by the New Deal, which prefers the policy of deductionism and the establishment of doles at the expense of inordinate taxation through the issuance of bonds.

"These bonds, together with their interests, have reached the point under our present financial system where they are unpayable, with the result that the most heinous species of uncontrollable inflation is facing the entire Nation.

"Further than having given expression to these opinions, I have not contemplated the launching of a so-called third party. A renovated Republican Party possessing a contrite heart for its former misdeeds and an honest standard bearer in whom I could repose complete confidence, are all that are necessary to convert this Nation from ruinous Rooseveltism. Otherwise, the re-election of Roosevelt is inevitable, with the result that our liberty will be likewise exploited.

"CHARLES COUGHLIN."

Money Policy Disputed.

By the Associated Press.

The prospect of dispute over the monetary plank in the platform was added yesterday to convention uncertainties confronting the Republicans.

Senator Borah, of Idaho, challenged the recommendation by five organizations of the party in New York for restoration of the gold standard.

Of simultaneous interest was the second break in the uninstructed New York delegation to the convention toward Gov. Landon of Kansas. One delegate already had promised "support." Six more announced they "favored" the Midwesterner.

Claim More Strength.

Landon managers claim more strength among the 90 votes of the Empire State, but the organizations for Col. Frank Knox of Illinois, and other candidates have conceded nothing.

All the 1,001 delegates save 28 from Indiana and two from Peurto Rico have been named. Against "better than 300" claimed for Landon on the first ballot, the Knox managers have estimated their strength then would be a minimum of 230.

In the course of the many discussions of the situation at the Capitol, Senator Capper, of Kansas, took occasion to discount rumors of a "stop Landon" movement being set afoot.

His Speech Awaited.

The Borah currency protest was drawn forth by a proposed plank recommending a dollar "convertible into gold at a rate subject to change only by Congress." Whether the Idahoan would add this question to the antimonopoly issue he is expected to press especially at Cleveland went unsaid for the present. Party leaders awaited his speech tonight. The speech, Borah's last before the convention, will be over the Columbia Broadcasting System at 7:30 p. m. (E. S. T.).

To make the currency again convertible into gold, Borah contended, "would be especially hurtful to the agricultural interests of this country."

"I do not think it would be in any sense practicable under present conditions if ever," he said. "It seems to me that Great Britain is adding a new chapter to the money question which we shall want to know more about before attempting to go back to the gold standard."

State Department experts refer to the British system now as a "managed currency."

Return to Gold Asked.

The proposal for return to the gold standard was contained in the platform offered Monday by the National Republican Club Inc., New York Republican Club, Woman's National Republican Club, Inc., National Republican Builders, Inc., and Young Woman's Republican Club of New York.

Representative Martin, of Massachusetts, will be the Landon floor manager at the convention, John D. M. Hamilton, of the committee working for the nomination of Gov. Landon, announced.

In his capacity as assistant floor leader for the House Republicans, Martin has had close association with the leader, Representative Snell of New York, who has been designated permanent chairman at Cleveland.

Sloan Assails 'Economic Fallacies' in 2 Speeches by President; Challenges His Contentions.

By Franklyn Waltman

ALFRED P. SLOAN, jr., president of General Motors Corporation, in two recent speeches on the Pacific Coast, has performed a valuable service to the Nation in seeking to concentrate attention on the economic fallacies contained in President Roosevelt's "fewer workers working less" speech in Baltimore and his "higher wages-higher prices" speech in New York.

WALTMAN

The wonder is that some of our industrial magnates were not quicker to take exceptions to the President's contentions. Nothing is more important than that the people of this country thoroughly discuss and understand the implications of the philosophy laid down in the New York speech a month ago by the President.

Not only did Mr. Roosevelt assert that it constituted his political philosophy, but his economic and social philosophy as well. In the NRA and the AAA he already has given the country a taste of how that philosophy works out in practice, and Mr. Roosevelt recently has indicated that if he is re-elected more experiments along NRA lines may be projected.

The American Federation of Labor, however, is on record in favor of a 30-hour work-week bill and certain members of Congress would at this moment be pressing such legislation were it not for the Constitutional barriers set up by the Supreme Court. But the idea has by no means been abandoned. As long as the country has 10,000,000 unemployed workers within its boundaries, there will be agitation for proposals of this kind.

Consequently, Mr. Sloan's reply to the President's contentions deserves the most careful consideration. Not only does he speak as an experienced manufacturer but his industry is the outstanding example of the successful operation of the theory he projects. And, it should be said, he is as anxious to end unemployment as President Roosevelt. But he does not believe it can be done by pursuing a course of less work and higher prices.

Mr. Sloan regards as astonishing the President's contention that "reduction of costs of manufacturing does not mean more purchasing power and more consumed—it means just the opposite." Many others have been astounded by that rather ambiguous statement, which has been taken to mean that production costs could be reduced only by cutting wages or increasing working hours.

"It can be demonstrated beyond any reasonable doubt," Mr. Sloan asserted, "that those industries which have been most successful in reducing the costs of goods and services and expanding their markets have, at the same time, paid the highest wage and have continually raised that wage through evolution."

The motor car manufacturer went on to say that "if we reduce the cost of goods and services by greater efficiency, by better technique and thus are able to lower prices, we shall stimulate the market because more can buy"—and it follows an increased demand will create work for more persons. Lower prices instead of stabilized prices should be the aim, he contended, terming price stabilization as "an umbrella to cover the inefficient."

Mr. Sloan, moreover, believes that more and better jobs will be created—not by dividing the available work—but by modernizing industry's productive facilities. He asserted the Nation's industrial plant is obsolete and that business should make larger financial provision for the obsolescence of plants. "To promote obsolescence," he argued, "is to accelerate progress."

Since a rebuilding of the American industrial plant would stimulate employment in the durable goods industry, which remains the worst afflicted, the Administration would in general terms heartily approve the last Sloan suggestion. But instead of encouraging such action, the New Deal aggressively discourages it by proposing tax bills which would penalize those corporations which were willing to undertake rebuilding and renovation out of their earnings.

One of the implications of the President's higher wage-higher price philosophy is that it will never be possible for this country to find private employment for all of those now without jobs and it has been responsible for the gloomy, defeatist attitude of some New Dealers who assert that we shall always have an unemployed army of 5,000,000 or so—and that there never will be jobs available for some youths now coming of age.

But Mr. Sloan visualizes as not far off the day when through efficiency, improved technique of production and cheaper prices, this country actually will be faced with a shortage of workers rather than with an unemployment problem. This view is supported by the Industrial Conference Board which, as the result of an elaborate study of "Machinery, Employment and Purchasing Power," has concluded:

"It is false to the facts and insincere to the spirit of progress to look back to the prosperity and employment of 1929—itself an impressive accomplishment of the machine—as something that cannot be attained or exceeded by the same means, and to assume that the same powerful agency of progress dooms a fifth of our working population to unemployment in private enterprise and support by Government in the future.

"With an increasingly severe shortage of skilled labor already evident in the early stages of recovery from business depression, while 10,000,000 of our working population are unemployed, and about 20,000,000 of our whole population depending upon Government support, wise and sincere statesmen in both industry and public office will rather look forward to the future when, with a stationary or declining population, we shall have to consider how the mechanization of industry and trade may be speeded, workers trained and adapted to new occupations and greater productiveness, and our people inspired and encouraged to new enterprise in order that the rise in the standard of life may be sustained."

Liberty League Celebrates Date Of NRA's Death

Says Supreme Court Has 'Sweepingly Condemned' the New Deal.

By the Associated Press.

The Liberty League marked the first anniversary of the death of NRA yesterday with an analysis of Supreme Court opinions invalidating New Deal laws and an assertion that in them the court had uttered a "sweeping condemnation" of the Rooseveit Administration.

"On the basis of the decisions of the Supreme Court," it said, noting that one year ago yesterday the high court found NRA unconstitutional, "the present Administration is the first in the history of the United States to initiate a carefully planned and comprehensive move to accomplish fundamental changes in the system of government.

"The movement has been doubly dangerous because of the subtle efforts to circumvent the Constitution without proposing amendments. Those responsible for the new pattern of government have preferred to avoid submission to the people of the questions involved.

"They seek to obtain their purpose through usurpation or judicial interpretation rather than through the orderly process of amendment."

The league then cited what it considered "evidences that the New Deal, despite repeated rebukes from the judicial branch, is still intent upon subverting constitutional government in the United States."

The league interpreted the decisions of the court as "clearly establishing" that the New Deal has "contemplated and definitely attempted to bring about fundamental changes in the American form of government."

Spain's Striking Waiters Ordered Back to Work

Madrid, May 27 (AP).—The government ordered striking Syndicalist waiters back to their jobs tonight.

Proprietors were told to reopen establishments closed by the walkout after waiters sought discharges of Fascist employes. Heavy police guards were furnished, but only minor incidents were reported.

Gasoline truck drivers in Seville Province halted deliveries of motor fuel, tying up hundreds of automobiles. A general strike at Vitoria brought a meat and fish shortage after employers discharged men who failed to report for work.

Evicted Striker Takes Her Garden With Her

Mrs. Hickey's children picked the garden clean and carted the vegetables off today while officers piled their furniture in the yard.

Families of nine strikers were evicted today. Twelve more are scheduled to go Friday.

A strike started at the Rockwood Hosiery Mill seven weeks ago when working hours were increased from eight to ten without a raise in wages.

Leaders to Get Citizens' Plea For Sisson Bill

Delegation to Visit Byrns, O'Connor, Walsh, King on 'Rider' Repeal.

A delegation this morning will call upon House and Senate leaders and plead for Congressional action on the bills to repeal the "Red rider" before adjournment.

The party plans to visit Speaker Joseph W. Byrns and Chairman John J. O'Connor of the House Rules Committee on the House side. It then will call upon Senator David I. Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts, who is piloting the repeal bill in the Senate, anad upon Senator W. H. King, chairman of the Senate District Committee.

It was said that the civic representatives will urge Speaker Byrns to make provision for House consideration of the Sisson bill.

The organizations to be represented are the Central Labor Union, the Federation of Teachers, the League of Women Voters, the American Association of University Women and the District Parent-Teacher Congress.

Congress Asked To Investigate Murder Legion

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, May 27.—A Congressional investigation to "blow the lid off" the Black Legion and kindred organizations appeared likely today as additional indications of the secret terrorist society's ramifications reached investigators.

The demand for Congressional action was made by Representative Dickstein (Democrat), New York, almost at the moment Prosecutor Duncan C. McCrea telegraphed Attorney General Cummings an appeal for the assistance of the Department of Justice.

Dickstein introduced a resolution asking appointment of a committee of seven to investigate the Black Legion, the "Black Shirts," the Christian Party, the "A. B. C. Legion of New York" and the "Robert Edward Edmonson Organization of New York."

In his request for aid, McCrea said he had received letters from officers or individuals in "from 15 to 18" States relating crimes attributed to the Black Legion. Some of these involved kidnapings in which State lines were crossed "for murder or intimidation," McCrea said.

Dickstein said he had information that activities of the legion centered in Michigan, Ohio, Colorado and Pennsylvania, and to some extent in New York.

Rumors of Black Legion aspirations to a dictatorship enforced by scourge and knife were under scrutiny in some of the States named, and in Michigan Attorney General David H. Crowley asked that a grand jury be called to conduct a State-wide investigation.

Twelve Face Court in Irons.

Twelve of the 13 men charged here with the "ritual execution" of Charles A. Poole were brought in irons into common pleas court today for examination, but the hearing was adjourned after three witnesses told of identifying the body of the 32-year-old WPA worker who "knew too much" about the legion.

McCrea asked the adjournment, explaining that additional arrests were imminent. He pointed out that one of the accused was too ill to appear, and that 12 others still were sought. Denied bail, the prisoners were returned to the county jail.

Two Michigan Congressmen disclosed that they had received threats, possibly from the Black Legion. Representative Hoffman said in Washington that he had received an unsigned letter telling him he "ought to be under a plot of ground 2 by 6 feet," and Representative Dondero said in his last campaign that he was told:

"If you want to be re-elected, you had better join the bullet club."

Dondero's home is in nearby Royal Oak, where investigators are examining the possibility that Father Charles E. Coughlin's original Shrine of the Little Flower was burned last March 17 by the Black Legion, which has for a principal tenet opposition to the Catholic Church.

Developments outside Michigan included an inquiry in Colorado to determine if warning handbills distributed during the recent blockade against alien labor were the work of the night riders' organization, and the revelation that an Ohio relief worker had testified before a legislative committee that the Black Legion had sought control of work relief appointments in the Lima area.

The testimony at Lima was given by George Armstrong, who said Black Legion members took an oath to kill their enemies "if necessary." His assertion was confirmed by documents seized in numerous raids in Michigan.

Michigan State police have charged that Lima is one of the "hotbeds" of the organization in the Middle West. It is the home of V. F. Effinger, whom McCrea has sought to question concerning Black Legion activities.

No Jurisdiction, He Says.

By the Associated Press.

Attorney General Cummings yesterday said the Government has "no jurisdiction whatever" in the Black Legion investigation in Michigan.

Cummings said he received no request that the Federal Government enter the investigation, and that he was following the case "only in the newspapers."

District Child Wins Movie Contract

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

JOAN MARIE FELT.

Joan Felt Is Sponsored in Hollywood Career by Mary Pickford.

A $75-a-week contract for 4-year-old Joan Marie Felt, daughter of the chief engineer of the power division of the WPA, yesterday was approved by the Los Angeles courts.

The accomplished little blonde dancer, singer and actress—her father vouches for that, and his judgment has been borne out by Mary Pickford's interest and her contract to the child, which eventually will pay $1,250 a week—is "somewhat like Shirley Temple."

With her mother, Mrs. Freda Felt, a musician, not an actress, the newest Hollywood child actress journeyed to the silver screen center from Washington last November, ostensibly to visit a cousin, Miss Bessie Smith, but actually to see what the movies offered. It was a long siege of the studios, but Mrs. Felt trotted her daughter from one to the other and finally attracted the attention of Mary Pickford.

"We had no pull," said the child's father, Wright L. Felt, "and it was purely a matter of keeping at it until someone recognized Joan's talents.

"I am delighted, for she is a born actress and belongs in Hollywood."

Joan made over 30 appearances at neighborhood entertainments, church bazaars, club dinners and the like in Washington during the past year before she tried Hollywood.

Joan's contract is with the Pickford-Lasky productions and calls for a graduated salary rise over a seven-year period.

"Joan secured a screen test at the Pickford-Lasky studios before Miss Pickford actually saw her. Then she saw the results of the test and sent for Joan. Joan appeared and seems to have captivated Mary," the father said.

"No picture has been selected for her as yet and I have no idea when she will begin work on one."

Joan has short, plump legs, a ring of gold curls, a chubby face and an enchanting baby smile, says her father. She tap dances, toe dances, does ballroom dancing, sings all the popular tunes and recites about 20 or 30 different pieces.

"Her mother is a fine musician although she has never appeared in public except to accompany Joan at the piano when she sings or dances," Felt explained.

"She has no movie ambitions for herself, only for Joan and perhaps a small one for our son who will go to Hollywood next month after his school closes."

Young James Wright Felt, who is 10, is quite a musician, and often when his mother does not accompany Joan, he sits at the piano and does the job for her.

No Ambitions.

"I don't think he has any ambitions for a screen career," Felt said. "He is very proud of Joan and says he can't wait to get to Hollywood. He thinks he might get a small part during the summer, perhaps, but wants to come back to school here next year. The things at school are more important to him than anything in Hollywood."

James goes to St. Anne's Parish School out on Wisconsin avenue and the day after his classes are over for the year, he will start West. He's a self-reliant boy, his father says, and may make the journey alone either by train or by air.

Before coming to Washington two years ago, the Felts lived for some time in Westfield, N. J., and Joan was born in Elizabeth, N. J. Their home now is at 3807 Van Ness street northwest.

The fact that the contract was in the Los Angeles courts is purely routine, Felt said, as all child contracts must be approved by the courts.

Admirals' Daughters To Christen U.S. Ships

Daughters of two of the Navy's high-ranking admirals were designated yesterday by President Roosevelt to act as sponsors in the forthcoming christenings of a new submarine and destroyer.

They are Evelyn Standley, daughter of Admiral William H. Standley, Acting Secretary of Navy, who July 7 will christen the submarine Pickerel, and Frances W. Andrews, daughter of Rear Admiral Adolphus Andrews, chief of the Bureau of Navigation, who will break a bottle June 17 across the bow of the destroyer Lamson.

$101,000 Bond Forgery 'Plot' Laid to Banker

By the United Press.

Kansas City, Mo., May 27.—Frank R. Beddow, who rose from a bellboy in an Omaha hotel to head a $1,000,000 real estate and banking chain business, was accused today of engineering a $101,000 forged bond plot in which 20 other persons were involved.

Along with Beddow, two Sioux City, Iowa, deputy sheriffs and an attorney of Iowa City were accused in indictments returned by a Federal grand jury here.

Federal agents in Sioux City were reported to have arrested several of the accused. Beddow is a prisoner in the Government Hospital for Defectives at Springfield, Mo.

The bogus bonds were copies of an Omaha municipal bond which Beddow had purchased, according to L. A. Johnson, postal inspector. Johnson reported recovery of all the forged securities.

It was while Beddow was being held in the Springfield prison in connection with the failure of his banking chain in South Dakota that he directed the disposal of five of the bonds in Houston, Tex.

Richard K. Phelps, assistant district attorney, said Beddow conceived the plot while recovering from automobile injuries and at a time when he sought to save his control of 18 South Dakota banks which were being squeezed by depression and illegal management.

Industry Shows 7% Index Gain In Last Month

Durable Goods Pay Rolls Lead in Rise, Says Reserve Board.

The Federal Reserve Board reported last night the volume of industrial production rose from 93 per cent of the board's 1923-25 average in March to 100 per cent in April.

The gain was accomplished by an increase in employment and pay rolls in the durable goods industries, the board said in its monthly report.

The average rate of production at steel mills during April was 69 per cent of capacity, as compared with 59 per cent for the preceding month.

Automobile Increase.

Factory output of automobiles totaled 503,000 passenger cars and trucks in April and, except for the spring months of 1929, was larger than in any previous month.

In the first three weeks of May, activity in both the steel and automobile industries was maintained at about the levels reported for April, the board said.

The output of non-durable manufactures in April was slightly larger than the previous month, due chiefly to gains at cotton textile mills, meat-packing establishments and tobacco factories.

Textile Output Declines.

Activity at woolen and silk mills declined. Bituminous coal production showed little change from March to April, although a big decrease is usual at this season, the board said. There was a sharp rise from the low level of March at anthracite mines. The output of crude petroleum continued to increase.

Factory employment and pay rolls were larger in mid-April than the month earlier. Increases in the number of workers were general in the durable goods industries, with the most marked advances at steel mills and at plants producing machinery, automobiles and building materials.

There was also an increase in employment at rubber-tire factories which, in March, had been affected by a strike.

Townsend

Thomas Hardwick, of Georgia, another Townsend lawyer, attempted to insert a statement by Downey into the record. The committee received it, but refused to put it in the record.

The statement said:

"Be advised I shall not honor your subpena. Like Dr. Townsend, I challenge you to punitive action, for the unholy record of this investigation is a shield that will protect us. All over America hundreds of newspapers and citizens by the millions approve our conduct.

"Though they energetically oppose our economics, they enthusiastically defend our defiance of your oppressive conduct.

"So, gentlemen, proceed. Congressional inquisitions are on trial. Your delay to force the issue against us weakens your prestige and increases ours. We seek the opportunity to present before the bar of Congress or before an American jury our charges against you. Will you not therefore hasten your action, make good your threats and proceed against us?"

The committee said Downey's statement will be considered in executive session. It is possible contempt charges will be brought against him later.

The only witness before the committee was Albert G. Hart, 27-year-old economics instructor at Chicago University. He told the committee that Townsendites overestimated the number of transactions in the United States on which they based their theory that a 2 per cent transaction tax would raise sufficient money to give everybody over 60 years old $200 a month.

Traffic Expert Testifies on Rail Bill

Tax Rise Hinted Here

which appears to be the goal of the Texan along with the eventual elimination of the Federal lump sum payment.

The law states that whenever the District government is faced with a threatened deficit, the commissioners must raise new or additional taxes to offset it.

Indications yesterday were that the Senate conferees will not yield on the $5,700,000 lump sum payment demanded by President Roosevelt, but that they may agree to elimination of the character education funds and to en amended salary rider in order to save the District bill.

Senator Thomas, chairman of the District sub-committee was authorized to confer with Blanton informally and to ascertain whether the House managers are willing to discuss a possible compromise or whether they will insist upon following the instructions which the Texan induced the House to adopt Tuesday.

If the House group remains adamant, there will be no course left to Thomas but to introduce a continuing resolution, which would place the District on a very restricted budget for 1937 but would continue the $5,700,000 Federal contribution and the $87,000 for character education.

Such a resolution might run into the same impasse as the present appropriations bill, however, as Blanton has already introduced a joint resolution to continue the 1936 act with the Federal contribution and character education funds deleted.

The cancellation of the conference scheduled for today was understood to have been advised by members of the Senate sub-committee who complained they did not wish to waste further time in futile debates with the House managers unless there is a likelihood of an agreement.

From Surplus to Deficit.

Statements made by Blanton when he introduced his resolution to instruct the House conferees indicated that he, at least, merely wanted to obtain the backing of the House in his determination not to yield on the lump-sum fight.

The District budget, since it left the hands of the District Commissioners last fall, has undergone some startling changes. As reported by the Budget Bureau, it would have provided a surplus of about $2,500,000 at the end of the fiscal year 1937. Now it is threatened with an even larger deficit.

The District Commissioners were tricked by the House sub-committee on appropriations into approving new Capital improvements that they doubtless would not have indorsed had they not anticipated the Budget Bureau surplus.

The House group added $1,000,000 to start a badly needed courts building, $250,000 to begin construction of a new Chain Bridge, and $383,000 for an addition to Eastern High School. These items would not have unbalanced the local budget had not the sub-committee at the same time cut $3,000,000 off the Federal contribution.

Only once this year have the District Commissioners shown an inclination to raise the tax rate, and that was when they were asking for a substantial increase in the emergency relief appropriation. However, when this was denied them both in the House and the Senate, they stated there was no necessity for additional tax revenue.

3-Power Pact For Over-Age Vessels Hinted

Destroyers, Submarines Involved; Navy Agrees to British Increase.

Possibility of an arrangement by which Great Britain, the United States and Japan would retain excess over-age destroyer and submarine tonnage under the London Naval Treaty of 1930, was indicated yesterday with the receipt by the State Department of the Navy's official reaction to the recent proposal by Britain that she be permitted to retain 40,000 tons of destroyers scheduled to be scrapped by January 1.

Although the details of the Navy's views on the British proposal were not made public, Admiral William H. Standley, acting Secretary of the Navy, at a press conference yesterday, indicated that in principle the Navy was not opposed to an increase in British destroyer strength.

To retain these ships, however, Admiral Standley declared, Great Britain would have to invoke the "escalator" clause in the 1930 naval treaty. Any agreement outside of the treaty provisions, he pointed out, would constitute a treaty and require ratification by the Senate, which was impossible before expiration of the pact.

He estimated that this country had about 100,000 tons of excess, over-age destroyers. Although some of these ships are so obsolete they would be scrapped in any case, he said, a good portion of the tonnage could be kept.

The United States, he asserted, would not invoke the "escalator" clause, but would wait until either Japan or Britain, the other treaty signatories, do.

The "escalator" clause specifically authorizes any signatory to build beyond treaty limits when it considers its national security threatened by the naval expansion of a non-signatory power. Although Britain's recent proposal for the retention of over-age destroyers was motivated by concern over increased Italian submarine strength, the British had hoped to avoid invoking the clause by securing the consent of Washington and Tokyo to an extra-treaty arrangement.

That the Japanese were favorable to such an arrangement was considered likely in view of their counter-proposal that they be given the right to retain excess submarine tonnage. Naval authorities estimate that Japan has about 20,000 tons of excess submarine tonnage, slightly under the American excess of that tonnage.

This country's insistence upon operating within the treaty may force Britain to invoke the escalator clause. In that case the United States would automatically be permitted to retain an equivalent excess destroyer tonnage.

The London Naval Treaty has no connection with the so-called "swiss cheese" pact that was ratified by the Senate last week but supplements the Washington Naval Treaty of 1922.

Watching Test Flights.

The Navy is awaiting completion of experimental flights of the giant German Zeppelin Hindenburg before formulating its policy on the future of lighter-than-aircraft, it was revealed yesterday by Admiral William H. Standley, acting Secretary of Navy.

Definite action on lighter-than-aircraft will be taken before the next budget is drawn up, Standley declared in response to a question whether the Navy was considering embarking upon a new venture in airship construction.

"However, we are not going to make up our minds definitely until the Hindenburg completes its experimental flights," he added.

The use by the giant dirigible of the Navy's hangar at Lakehurst involved no cost to the Navy Department, Standley declared. Not only are all fees covered in advance by a special deposit in this country, but the German government has been compelled to take out a $1,000,000 insurance policy to cover any damage that might be caused.

The total cost per trip to the airship is estimated at between $3,000 and $5,000.

Retrial Asked by 5 In Tampa Flogging

Bartow, Fla., May 27 (AP).—Five former Tampa policemen, convicted of kidnaping in the Tampa flogging case, asked for a new trial today on grounds the jurors fought in the courthouse and drank liquor at their hotel.

In another action earlier today at Tallahassee, the five failed to get a writ of habeas corpus from the Florida Supreme Court. They asked it on the contention warrants for their arrest were faulty.

They were convicted Saturday of kidnaping Eugene F. Poulnot, who, with Sam Rogers and Joseph Shoemaker, was flogged, tarred and feathered by a mob November 30. Judge Robert T. Dewell has not yet sentenced them. Ten years in prison is the maximum penalty possible.

The liquor drinking and fist fighting charges were two of 31 reasons for retrial advanced by the convicted men in the action here.

Chinese Reject Japan's Reason For Army Step

Nanking Denies Troops Were Needed in North; to Inform U. S.

Nanking, May 27.—China tonight refused to accept Japan's explanation of why she poured thousands of additional troops into North China.

In answer to a protest from the Nationalist government, Tokyo explained that the increasing numbers of Japanese subjects in North China made a heavy reinforcement of her Tientsin garrison necessary.

The foreign office here issued a statement disclosing that it has instructed its ambassador to Washington and other Chinese diplomats in world capitals to inform the governments to which they are accredited that China is unable to accept the reasons Japan has given for augmenting the troops.

In addition, the government was understood to have forwarded a new protest to Tokyo.

The foreign office statement denied that unstable political conditions exist in North China, as Japanese officials have asserted, and reiterated the view that the increase of Japanese troops in North China: "Cannot fail to arouse Chinese suspicions of Japan's motives."

China's latest protest was understood to point out that strong reinforcements are not permitted under the Boxer Protocol.

The newly formed "East Hopeh Province Autonomous District," dispatches from Peiping quoted Chinese newspapers as saying, would soon be reorganized into a special district of the Japanese-controlled North China demilitarized zone. The district already is strongly under Japanese influence.

The papers added that Chang Teh, now counsellor of the East Hopeh political council, would be appointed director of the district under Japanese orders.

A group of 150 Koreans, said a Tientsin dispatch, in an attack on the Pukow Express, drove out Chinese passengers to make room for 552 bales of smuggled rayon consigned to the treaty port of Chowstun, Shantung Province.

City and Rural Issues Enliven Store Bill Fight

House Hears Nichols Tell Virtues of Crossroads Institutions.

Debate in the House yesterday on the Patman bill to regulate chain stores by eliminating price discriminations ended up in a fight between city and rural members, with party lines forgotten, and New York City congressmen "weeping" over the higher prices farmers will be required to pay, if the bill becomes law.

Championing the rural point-of-view, Representatives Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, boasted that he comes from a town of 3,000 people and outlined to the House the virtues of "spit and sizzle" clubs which use the cross-roads grocery as a meeting house. Nichols characterized the small community, and the corner store as "bulwarks of the Nation," and he declared that unless chains are checked "some of the fiber of the country will be destroyed."

The House devoted an hour to consideration of the rule to take up the bill, then adopted the rule and proceeded to debate the bill for four hours.

Urges Adoption.

Representative Mapes (Republican), of Michigan, high ranking member of the Rules committee, urged adoption of the bill as salvation for independent merchants. Mapes said he believed the bill went too far in eliminating the basing-point system of selling, but he said adoption of committee amendments would obviate the danger.

Representative Wright Patman (Democrat), of Texas, author of the bill, defended it against charges that it is opposed by farm organizations and the Grange. Patman said his recent conversations with farm leaders, together with amendments eliminating the basing-point features and protecting farmers' co-operatives, had dispersed their objections to the bill.

Representatives Emanuel Celler and Sol Bloom, Democrats, of New York City, opposed the measure, and contended it would harm farmers and consumers because it would raise prices. Celler quoted letters from farm leaders opposing the bill. Agreeing that his district contained no farms, Celler said, nonethe-less, that he had a "very friendly feeling" toward farmers, and always voted against legislation not in their interest.

More Competition.

"You look after your city people, stop those crocodile tears, and let us country Congressmen look after the farmers," Nichols told him.

Representative Peyser (Democrat), of New York, declared that the result of the Patman bill would be to increase chain stores, instead of decreasing them. He said manufacturers would be forced to enter the retail business in order to dispose of their goods, and that small retail merchants would suffer further competition.

Similar legislation, sponsored by Majority Leader Robinson, has already passed the Senate. The Senate bill contains no anti-basing point provisions, and elimination of the basing point feature of the Patman bill is expected to facilitate an agreement between the two Houses when the bills go to conference.

Negro Picker of Rags Pleads Murder Guilt

Chicago, May 27 (AP).—Thomas Starr, 29, Negro rag picker who confessed he entered the Y. W. C. A. Hotel room of Mrs. Lillian Guild, 59-year-old widow, and beat her to death, pleaded guilty to murder today before Chief Justice Dennis J. Normoyle.

He also pleaded guilty to an indictment charging him with burglary of the room of Miss Lois Rickert at the St. Luke's Hospital nurses' home. Both cases were continued until tomorrow.

British M. P. Leaving White House

Fingers, Ears 'Gates' to Mind, Says British Leader of Blind

Eyes Not Sole Contact, Sir Ian Fraser Points Out; Head of English Society in U. S. to Confer on Work Among Veterans.

"The eyes are not the only gateway to the mind."

A blind man's mind may be reached through his fingers and his ears, Sir Ian Fraser, chairman of the executive council of St. Dunstan's, the British Society for Blind World War Veterans, said yesterday at the Shoreham Hotel.

Not quite 39, Sir Ian has been head of the British war blind for the past 15 years. He is serving his second term as a Member of Parliament.

At the outbreak of the war Sir Ian was only 17, but he left Marlborough, the school where he was studying, and went to Sandhurst, the English West Point.

Joined Volunteer Army.

After a year's training he was commissioned with the First Battalion of the King's Shropshire Light Infantry, and went to the northern front in France, a member of the volunteer army which fought through the Pashendale and Somme offensives.

He was wounded and lost the sight of both eyes in the latter battle.

"And so," he said, "I was 'through' just before I was 19 years old."

Far from being stopped, Sir Ian has been working steadily since the war. In 1921 he was elected head of the St. Dunstan's, to which England's 2,500 blind World War soldiers belong. He was elected a member of Parliament in 1924 and again in 1931.

To Visit U. S. Agencies.

"I have spent most of my time in recent years organizing work and recration for blind soldiers," he said. "At present I am in Washington to confer with American agencies for the blind and to see how we can co-operate with them."

Asked about the current political situation in England, Sir Ian said there had been, in his opinion, a decided swing back to the Hoare-Laval plan, which accepted the conquest of Ethiopia as inevitable, and that England would certainly not wish to fight Italy alone to stop her annexing the African empire.

Sir Ian spent most of yesterday consulting with officials from the Library of Congress, but he also paid a call on President Roosevelt and Secretary of State Cordell Hull.

Prison Guard, Wife Slain by Convict

Baton Rouge, La., May 27 (AP).—A life-term convict shot and killed a Louisiana penitentiary camp captain and his wife tonight and escaped.

R. L. Himes, general manager of the penitentiary at Angola, 60 miles north of here, said the victims were Capt. N. J. Himel and his wife. The prisoner was Wilfred Lindsly, 23.

The convict made his way into a hilly, sparsely-populated country and penal farm bloodhounds were brought into use. Guards and all other available men formed a posse. Officials said they thought the fleeing prisoner might attempt to work northward into Mississippi.

Polar 'Tyrant' Dies for Crime Against Soviet

Wrangel Island 'Dictator' Loses Plea; Aid Also Put to Death.

By the Associated Press.

Moscow, May 27.—K. B. Semenchuk, "tyrant" of Wrangel Island, convicted of leading a reign of terror, was shot to death tonight.

His chief lieutenant, S. P. Startseff, also paid with his life for the killing of Dr. W. R. Wulfson, member of a Soviet scientific expedition which visited the Polar station.

Official announcement tersely said: "The sentence of the supreme court has been carried out." Pleas for clemency by the convicted men had been rejected earlier by the central executive committee.

No mention was made as to the time and place of the execution. It was generally understood, however, the men were shot by one official who discharged a pistol into each prisoner's head. The sentences were probably carried out in Butisky Prison, the largest in Moscow, where the prisoners were confined.

The Wrangel Island case attracted the widest attention of any criminal case since the assassination of Serge Kiroff, one of Joseph Stalin's chief assistants, in December, 1934.

The former island "dictator" and his assistants were sentenced to death after conviction on a charge of political banditry, an outgrowth of their alleged cruel treatment of Eskimos and a secondary charge of murder.

Sentenced Saturday night, they had 72 hours in which to seek clemency. The central committee denied their request and their period of grace expired last night. No official reason was disclosed for holding the execution over until today.

The wife of the former "tyrant" faces a charge of perjury as a result of her testimony during her husband's trial.

Both Semenchuk and Startseff denied the charges against them. Semenchuk wept bitterly when his sentence was pronounced, sobbing into a handkerchief "I don't deserve to die."

Red Cross Enrolls Class.

The District of Columbia Chapter of the American Red Cross announced yesterday that there are still a few vacancies in the morning class in "Home Hygiene and Care of the Sick," which is meeting on Wednesday and Friday mornings from 10 to 12. Enrollment closes on Wednesday, June 3. The class is meeting at the chapter house, 1730 E street northwest.

John A. Remon, general manager of the Chesapeake & Photomac Telephone Co., was re-elected president of the Washington Chapter of the Worcester Polytechnic Institute Alumni Association at its recent meeting. Other officers elected for the coming year are B. W. Marsh, vice president, and H. T. Cutler, treasurer.

Mystery!

Girl 'Found,' Decides She Doesn't Want to Be.

A 14-year-old girl, who said she was lost and then decided she didn't want to be "found," provided the police with a mild mystery yesterday.

The girl wandered through the west gate of the White House and announced to Sergt. Arthur M. Gibbons she was lost. Then she burst into tears.

Taken before Capt. Clarence Dalrymple, of the White House police, the girl said she was Betty Rose Alley, of Philadelphia. She added that she had come to Washington two days before with her mother, Mrs. John Alley.

On Tuesday, she said, her mother left her with "Jane," a cousin. The girl couldn't remember Jane's last name, but said they had stayed together Tuesday night at a downtown hotel. Hotel officials, however, had no record of her registration.

Capt. Dalrymple notified the Women's Bureau and then, with officers on their way to the White House, the girl departed. According to Capt. Dalrymple, she was last seen running around the corner of the State, War and Navy Building.

Local Boys Jailed On Liquor Charges

Baltimore, Md., May 27 (AP).—Two Washingotn youths who pictured themselves as Good Samaritans were sentenced to 18 months today on charges of possession, transportation and concealment of untaxed liquor.

They were G. H. Tooms and Carl P. Thomas, both 18. Thomas pleaded guilty at his trial in Federal Court and Tooms pleaded innocent. The pair were arrested on the road between La Plata and Washington, and 105 gallons of liquor were seized.

Thomas told the court that several months ago his car was in a crash and another Washington man helped him. The day of the seizure, he said, he got a phone call from this other man saying his car had been involved in an accident and asking for help.

Thomas said he drove into Maryland to find the other man, and located his car but could not find him. However, he said, he transferred the liquor in the other man's car into his and started back to Washington with it. Thomas' car slid into a ditch, however, and Federal agents came by, saw the liquor and seized it.

Indictmnet Check Says $150 Became $150,000

New York, May 27 (AP).—The grand jury today indicted Mrs. Hazel Short, of New York, on a charge of forgery in the second degree and uttering a forgery of a check issued by George Wallace, Los Angeles banker. Wallace complained his $150 check given her as a loan was raised to $150,000.

Assistant District Attorney Harold Hastings said Wallace charged the check was raised after he had given it to the woman, whom he befriended in Iowa when her automobile broke down on a transcontinental trip.

Widows Await Ruling by U. S. On Bonus Pay

Widows of veterans who have died since making application for bonus bonds to be delivered June 15, must await a Government decision on procedure through which they will receive the bonds, American Legion officials pointed out yesterday.

The registered letter, containing the bonds, will be addressed to the veteran who applied for them, and the Treasury Department has ruled no one, except the veteran, can receive the letter when the mail carrier delivers it.

Unless an exception to the rule is ordered, all such bonus payments must be directed to the veteran's estate.

Widows of veterans who died before application for the present bonus was made, already hold the adjusted service certificates in their own names, and the bonds will be mailed directly to them.

Veterans who have listed their addresses as "General Delivery" will be permitted to receive their bonds that way, legion headquarters announced in answer to many inquiries. The postoffice will devise some means of identification so that the former soldiers who apply there will get their registered letter. Fingerprints may be taken to establish identity in these cases, it was pointed out.

Father, Mother and Son All to Get Diplomas

Albany, Wis., May 27 (AP).—A father, mother and small son will receive diplomas from Albany High School this week. Mr. and Mrs. Warden W. Francis, who were forced by illness to give up their school work during their junior years, completed their courses by home study this year. Their son, Leo, is valedictorian of the class.

Federation Hears Leader Talk on Prophecy Power of Bible.

Howard B. Rand, secretary-general of the Anglo-Saxon Federation of America, told a group of followers in the Hotel Burlington last night that the destiny of the Anglo-Saxon and Celtic peoples is to show the world the way out of the present social and economic disorder.

The Angles, Saxons and Celts, Rand said, are descendants of the ten lost tribes of Israel. Both the Old Testament and modern historical research prove this, he insists.

It was because he, as a student of the Old Testament, recognized this destiny, that he started the Anglo-Saxon Federation on a national scale. That was in 1928.

The federation is not a religion. Neither is it a political group.

"It is," Rand says, "but a voice calling attention to the need of returning to fundamental principles as expressed in the commandments, statutes and judgments of the Lord."

For the most part, the theme of his talk was on the fulfillment of the prophecies in the Old Testament. The speaker showed that by means of the Bible or "Book," as he calls it, major events of the future may be foretold accurately.

He said that in 1928 he told a British intelligence service officer, an acknowledged agnostic, that the Bible prophesied Mussolini's invasion of Africa.

The present economic disorder in the United States Rand attributed to the Government's attempt to "go contrary to Scripture."

Rand said that someone had once complained to him of the Government's moral laxity in "taking gold and burying it in the ground." Rand said he replied that it would be a good thing if we abandoned the gold standard completely and returned to the monetary system of Israel.

The speaker said that we are "living in a day of prophetic fulfillment." It is the duty of his organization, he believes, to show the people of the United States the part they have to play and to encourage a more intimate knowledge of the Bible.

G. U. Nurses, Hygienists To Get Diplomas Today

A joint commencement program will be held at 4 p. m. today in Gaston Hall, Georgetown University, for the 24 graduate nurses of Georgetown Hospital and the 11 graduate hygienists of the School of Dentistry.

The Rev. Arthur A. O'Leary, S. J., president of the university, will present the diplomas and make the address. College seniors will act as ushers. The graduation exercises will be followed in the evening with dances for each class. The hygienists will also give a commencement tea Saturday at 4 p. m. at the dental school on Reservoir road. They will be addressed by Miss Margaret Jeffrys, chief dental hygienist of the Delaware State Health Department.

Alexandria Ship-Bread Best, Navy Reports of 1799 Reveal

Third Volume of Department's Documents, Now on Press for Summer Release, Pays Tribute to 'Little City Across the Potomac.'

The best ship-bread in the United States in the spring of 1799 was baked in Alexandria.

This is revealed in the third volume of Naval Documents, covering the three-month period from April through July, 1799, which is on the press and will be released for distribution by the Navy Department during the summer.

Among the hundreds of hitherto unpublished documents and letters to be contained in the book is one letter written by Secretary of Navy Benjamin Stoddert on April 30, from his offices in Philadelphia requesting the Navy's agent in Alexandria to ship 40,000 pounds of shipbread to Philadelphia. The letter explains that Alexandria bread had been found excellent, while the bread in Philadelphia and "eastward" is "very bad." The poor quality of bread served in some of the ships had raised numerous protests from the sailors.

The volume also reveals that Washington was not considered a fit place for the Navy Department's offices to be transferred to when scarlet fever raged in Philadelphia. Trenton was a better site, Stoddert contended.

Alexandria was not only the center of the best ship-bread in the Americas but was a lively shipbuilding city, another letter in the volume shows. The difference in modern methods of awarding contracts for ship construction, with virtually every detail itemized, as contrasted with the methods of those days, is revealed.

"I shall not trouble you with dimensions, models, etc., from hence," Stoddert wrote to Capt. Richard Conway, of Alexandria. "I wish her to be built agreeably to such model as you may approve, for I know I can confidently rely on your judgment * * * you will be allowed a commission of 2 per cent of your expenditures."

Stoddert, however, did caution Conway that the ship must not exceed 360 tons and must "have room enough in her hold to carry six months' water and provisions for 100 to 120 men," and warned that her armament be restricted to 18 9-pounders as "our captains are frequently fond of overloading their vessels with useless guns."

Most of them, officials said, are needed again as witnesses against each other.

"The moral offenses of the accused reached dimensions that we had not expected and could not expect," asserted Director Van Koolwyck, of the Appellate Court, who is acting as presiding judge.

"I plead guilty. I repent my offenses," said Father Steinhoff, according to the report which reached the country.

Legion to Claim Hewitt's Body if His Family Is Not Located.

Plans for the funeral of Thomas Hewitt, jr., war-time flying hero, who died here Sunday poverty stricken, may be delayed by unsuccessful efforts to locate known relatives—an estranged wife and son.

While Veterans' Bureau officials attempted yesterday to trace his family, Hewitt's body remained at the District Morgue. American Legion members, however, plan to claim the body within a few days if the family is not located.

Hewitt, a member of the famed Lafayette Escadrille and holder of numerous hero awards, died in a rooming house. He was saved from a burial in Potters Field by Commander Edward McE. Lewis, National Press Club Post of the American Legion, who learned of the case from a Post reporter.

Honors to Be Accorded.

Veterans groups will unite in giving their former comrade a funeral with full military honors and a grave in Arlington National Cemetery. Tentative arrangements also call for an escort of honor from the French Embassy.

Hewitt was 41. He was the twenty-sixth American to enlist in the Escadrille, Franco-American aviation unit. He wats born in New York, but little is known of his early life.

Raised $4,000,000 in Warf.

According to a National University Law School year-book—Hewitt was a graduate there in 1925—he was credited with raising $4,000,000 during the Victory Loan drive. He flew over the German lines shortly after the United States entered the war and dropped copies of President Wilson's declaration of war speech.

After the war, he returned to this country and enlisted at Fort George Wright, N. Y. Later, he made a year's tour of the Orient and Mexico.

Among Hewitt's decorations were the Ruban Commoratif de la Escadrille Lafayette and Blessis de Guerre Francaise.

Hewitt could never stage a "come back" in life. But when a bugler's "taps" echo across the rolling slopes of Arlington National Cemetery he will rest in a hero's grave—honored in death.

You'll never know how BIG and FINE a car you can get for less than $1,000*...

...unless you check these 3 points

1. Has it the comfort and luxury of a 125-inch wheelbase?
2. Has it fine-car engineering throughout?
3. Is the advertised price the price of the sedan?

"ONE OF AMERICA'S MOST DISTINGUISHED MOTOR CARS"

The Nash Ambassador has a 125-inch wheelbase. Compare it in this important respect with its nearest competitors!

The Ambassador is not a "scaled-down" model in any sense. There has been no "skimping" in upholstery or in fittings. And it brings you engineering advantages usually reserved by other manufacturers for cars priced much higher than the Ambassador. You get the famous Nash Twin-Ignition engine, for example. You get big, super-hydraulic brakes, the protection of a rugged all-steel body with steel top, and many other expensive-car features.

Yet the prices of these luxurious, big Ambassador sedans, including built-in trunks, range from only $835 to $995*. See the Ambassador at the nearest Nash-LaFayette showroom. Or better still, drive it! The Nash Motors Company, Kenosha, Wisconsin.

AUTOMATIC CRUISING GEAR available at slight extra cost. Reduces engine revolutions ⅓ at high speeds. Saves up to 25% in gas; up to 50% in oil!

CAR	WHEELBASE	PRICE RANGE 4-DOOR SEDANS*
Nash	125 inches	$885 to $995
Car A	118-122 "	$885 to $1090
B	118-121 "	$875 to $1045
C	115-121 "	$820 to $935
D	120 "	$1115

*WITH TRUNK

RooseveltSeeks New Coal Act Now, Says Lewis

President Said to Regard Law as Desirable, but Not on 'Must' List.

By the Associated Press.

Desire that a temporary substitute for the invalidated Guffey coal act be passed by this Congress was ascribed to President Roosevelt yesterday by John L. Lewis, United Mine Worker president.

Lewis, leaving a conference with Mr. Roosevelt, told reporters:

"It is the President's viewpoint that while the new Guffey-Vinson bill may not rightfully be considered 'must' legislation, he is definitely of the opinion that a bill of this character is necessary to maintain the temporary stabilization of the soft coal industry pending the working out of a permanent reform by Congress."

During the day the House Judiciary Committee reported favorably a bill to authorize interstate compacts for the conservation and stabilization of the coal industry.

Representative Ramsay (Democrat), West Virginia, sponsor of the measure, said he was hopeful of early House action.

The bill would give Congressional approval to agreements by West Virginia, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Illinois, Indiana, Kentucky and Tennessee for regulating the production and sale of coal.

The Guffey-Vinson bill, providing for price fixing in the soft coal industry, but omitting the labor provisions invalidated by the Supreme Court in its decision on the old Guffey act, was introduced last week in the Senate by Senator Guffey (Democrat), Pennsylvania, and in the House by Representative Vinson (Democrat), Kentucky.

Favorably reported by the Ways and Means Committee, the measure was given right of way on the floor of the House by Chairman O'Connor's Rules Committee.

Speaker Byrns said yesterday, however, that "we can't act on the bill this week."

British Policy

of an active preparedness program is now universally recognized.

Whether or not adherence to the principle of collective action would stand any further strain is, however, doubtful. British public opinion unreservedly blames the French for the Ethiopian debacle and the very human reaction is the argument that France need expect no British aid in any future difficulties that Hitler may create which do not directly menace Great Britain itself. Such difficulties are expected to arise at any time. The next European danger zone may be Austria; it may be Czechoslovakia. Indeed, the Italian triumph is, in British opinion, a secondary matter, important largely for the stimulus it has given to aggressive German action and the weakening effect it has had on collective resistance which the failure of the League of Nations implies.

In this tangled situation it is natural to hear emphasized in London more than ever the importance of Anglo-American relations and the necessity of improving them if western democracies are to survive the threat implied by victorious Italian fascism and the developing strength of the Nazi regime in Germany. Great Britain is not yet turning her back on her orientation toward Geneva. But it would do so in a moment were there any practical possibility of substituting some form of working agreement with Washington for the doubtful validity of the League Covenant.

Crutchfield Wins Honor.

Jack R. Crutchfield, son of Commander J. A. Crutchfield, attached to the Navy Department here, was selected yesterday as one of the ten members of the graduating class at the Naval Academy to receive letters of commendation from Rear Admiral David Foote Sellers, superintendent of the academy.

District Junk Shops Combed For 'Historic' Maryland Signs

Vanished Markers Provide Puzzle to Free State Officials.

Efforts of the State of Maryland to keep marked the historic places where its founders and defenders lived and died are being frustrated.

Someone is stealing the signs.

Five of the plaques have been jerked from their sockets beside Maryland's highways, and the Maryland States roads commission has appealed to Washington metropolitan police, who in turn have detailed a squad of "marker hunters" to search District junk shops.

For four years the plaques stood beside the road molested only by the weather. They cost $100 each. Topped by the insignia of the State of Maryland, they were designed to add beauty to the landscape.

J. Alexis Shriver, director of historical markers for the roads commission, made the appeal to the District police. Shriver couldn't understand what anyone would want with "General Sherwood's Home"—that's the way one was marked. Or with "Rose Hill" or "Piscataway" or "Araby" or "The Home of General Stone." He said the markers are worthless even if they did cost a lot of money.

Some were erected with the pen-

Dr. W. P. Kenealy Funeral Is Today

Funeral services for Dr. William P. Kenealy, 63, druggist of the city for many years at 831 North Capitol street, will be held today at 10 a. m. in St. Aloysius' Catholic Church.

This service will follow a brief one at his residence, 3 I street northeast, with interment in Mount Olivet Cemetery. Dr. Kenealy, a native of Washington, died at the Sibley Hospital late Monday night after an illness of two months.

Dr. Kenealy was a fourth-degree member of Keane Council, Knights of Columbus, and a member of the Alhambra, of the District Pharmaceutical Association, and the Washington Wholesale Drug Exchange. He is srvived by his widow, Mrs. Florence C. Kenealy and two sisters, Mrs. William J. Tobin and Mrs. Johanna C. Kenealy.

Mrs. Mitchell Dies; Washington Native

Mrs. Josephine Gamble Mitchell, a native of Washington and a member of society here during her early life, died yesterday at Emergency Hospital. She had been ill for some time and entered the hospital about a month ago.

Mrs. Mitchell had lived for the last 20 years in Franklin, Pa., where she engaged in club work. The daughter of the late Joseph and Sarah Gamble, of Washington, she was a graduate of National Park Seminary here.

Surviving are her husband, Thomas W. Mitchell, of Franklin, Pa; two sisters, Mrs. Stouffer and Mrs. Frederic Gebhard, also of this city, and a brother, William H. Gamble, a resident of nearby Virginia.

Maj. Hez McClellan Burial Is Today

Maj. Hez McClellan, Army flier, who was killed in an airplane crash Monday, will be buried at 11 a. m. today in Arlington National Cemetery.

Honorary pallbearers will be Lieut. Col. William O. Kyan, Majors Devereux M. Myers and George C. McDonald and Captains Alfred W. Marriner and John M. McCulloch, all of the air corps, and Maj. Eugene L. Harrison of the cavalry.

Formerly stationed at Bolling Field, Maj. McClellan was chief of the Army's flying service at Wright Field in Dayton, Ohio. He was awarded the Distinguished Service cross for pioneer flights in Alaska.

A. L. Milne Dies Of Heart Attack

While standing in line at the parcel post window of the new Postoffice Building late yesterday afternoon Alex L. Milne, a clerk at Garrison's toy and novelty shop, 1215 E street northwest, suffered a fatal heart attack.

Milne was identified by C. W. Keirn, a fellow employe. He lived at 1861 Newton street northwest.

Kiwanis Group Planning to Aid Crippled Pupils

Club Seeking to Transport Children in Absence of Bus Funds.

The Kiwanis Club yesterday was attempting to work out a plan whereby crippled pupils at the Weightman School might be taken to and from their classes until the deficiency bill, providing $1,350 to continue transportation of the students, is approved.

With funds used for the special bus service exhausted, the school yesterday was faced with the loss of three quarters of its scholars for the few remaining weeks of the semester. A similar situation is faced at the Magruder School, Negro institution for crippled youngsters.

Classes will be held at both schools this morning for only those pupils whose parents are able to bring them.

"School attendance isn't compulsory for physically handicapped children," Robert L. Haycock, assistant superintendent of schools, asserted yesterday.

"Even when transportation is provided, there is no effort to keep the children in school if a physician advises against it," he added.

Although the deficiency bill, which contains the item for transporting handicapped children to school, is before the District Committee of the Senate, officials fear it will not pass in time to make the money available before the school term ends next month.

Parents of all the crippled children have been asked to report today on their ability to bring the boys and girls to school the balance of the term.

Holton-Arms to Award Diplomas to 31 Girls

Thirty-one girls will graduate from Holton-Arms School at commencement exercises Monday. The graduation program begins Saturday at 5 p. m., when the primary school girls will present a play. At 8 p. m., the dramatic club will give Oscar Wilde's "The Importance of Being Earnest."

On Sunday there will be group singing in the school garden, after which the honor theses will be read. School prizes will be presented following the reading.

C. A. Aspinwall Honored at 'Y' By Colleagues

Book Containing Letters of Tribute Is Given Veteran Worker.

Clarence A. Aspinwall, for a quarter of a century a member of the board of managers of the Washington Young Men's Christian Association, was presented with a surprise gift by his "Y" colleagues in honor of his long service at the tenth annual Y. M. C. A. Old Timers reunion last night at the Central Y. M. C. A.

Aspinwall, recently returned from a four-month visit to the Far East, was given a leather-bound book containing more than 100 letters of tribute from as many of his friends, in and out of the association. The presentation was made by Leonard W. DeGast, general secretary of the "Y," who said that Aspinwall has been a member of the organization for 30 years, during part of which he was chairman of the finance committee.

The gift was awarded after Aspinwall had told of his tour. A banquet at which C. W. Pimper was toastmaster launched the reunion.

The veteran "Y" members held a brief memorial ceremony for ten "old timers" who have died since last year's reunion. They were John Joy Edson, John Cowan Letts, William S. Corby, Dr. W. J. Showalter, Ernest Georg Fischer, J. Philip Hermann, Emil Landman, W. Bertrand Acker, Dwight Clarke and F. A. Ray.

Among guests at the banquet were William Jones Rhees and Rhees Burket, grandsons of William J. Rhees, who aided in founding the Washington "Y" 84 years ago, and Thomas P. Morgan, jr., grandson of an early president of the organization of that name.

Justin Lawrie, choir director of Foundry M. E. Church, sang several songs of bygone days. After the banquet there was a "reminiscing bee" among the "Y" veterans.

Running True To Form.

The world is so well aware of the readiness of the Nazis to use any methods, however unscrupulous, to discredit their opponents that it will take little stock in the charges of immorality against 276 monks belonging to monasteries of the Order of St. Francis and the Congregation of Merciful Brethren in the Rhineland.

The trial of these men will be viewed for what in all likelihood it is—the screen for a new attack on the Catholic Church in Germany. Indeed, Catholic laymen acquainted with the anti-church activities of the Hitler regime, as well as the Catholic press both here and abroad, have for some time been anticipating just such a foul attack on these religious orders.

Some time ago, for instance, Prince Hubertus von Lowenstein predicted that the next stage in the Nazi war on the church would take the form of wholesale arrests of ecclesiastics who would be tried on trumped-up evidence already then being manufactured, backed up by witnesses carefully coached for their parts.

This prediction is now being fulfilled. In the next few months as the trial of the 276 monks is dragged out the regimented German press will no doubt exploit this "evidence" with all the license of a Roman holiday. With the Catholic press suppressed, with denials and counter-evidence carefully kept from the German public, the attempt will be made to poison public opinion against the church. But the outside world will recognize the tragic farce for what it is, simply a continuation in a more vile form of the war being waged by the Hitler regime against all those who in any form or to any degree stand out against the totalitarian state and its practices.

In that war no quarter has been given, even though by the Concordat of July 20, 1935, the rights of the church were clearly outlined. The campaign of attrition carried out against the Catholic occupational and youth organizations, the application of sterilization measures to Catholics and the muzzling of the Catholic press constitute mounting evidence that, from the Nazi point of view, the Concordat, like the Locarno treaty and other solemn pledges, are only scraps of paper to be cavalierly set aside when the interests of the totalitarian state demand it.

The trial of the 276 monks at Coblenz is only additional proof, if any were needed, of the innate barbarism of the Nazi regime.

Locating Responsibility

As the deficiency bill passed the House it carried an appropriation of $1,425,000,000 for relief. Under the terms of the bill this sum would go to WPA Administrator Hopkins, along with very wide discretion in allocating funds loosely "earmarked" according to types of projects. Yesterday the Senate Committee on Appropriations approved the relief measure but voted to vest authority to allocate funds directly in the President. This is a much sounder method of procedure than the House proposal to confer large discretionary spending powers upon a subordinate official.

To commend this single change, however, is extremely negative praise which is far from implying that the Senate bill itself is worthy of indorsement. Whether President Roosevelt or Administrator Hopkins is named as the executive authority to dispose of relief funds, there is no justification for Congressional abdication of control over public expenditures. Under both bills more specific designation of the projects to be financed and the agencies to be placed in charge of their execution is called for. The practice of voting lump sum appropriations so vaguely "earmarked" as to give extraordinary latitude to the spending authority violates every principle of sound budgetary practice.

Presumably the WPA will remain the chief agency for the administration of Federal relief, thereby prolonging a system which is a synonym for inefficiency and futility. Both branches of Congress have evaded the obligation to work out a relief program of a constructive nature, so that the present choice lies between two evils, of which the Senate bill is the lesser.

So long as the WPA continues to function, however, responsibility for its administration should remain centered in the President. Since he has induced Congress to grant him such enormous powers over the Nation's purse strings, he alone should bear the legal obligation of spending this money in the public interest. If the President comes to realize that all the debauchery of the WPA will be laid directly at the door of the White House, he may some day be persuaded to institute a genuine house cleaning.

A Fight To The Finish.

It is disheartening, but not surprising, to see the House line up behind Representative Blanton's program of penalties for the District. Congressmen who take no personal interest in the affairs of the Capital City fall an easy prey to the propaganda of the belligerent Texan. Especially is this true on the eve of an election when they feel the necessity of "soaking" the District on the sophomoric assumption that such a course will please voters "back home."

The three votes taken in the House should not, however, be considered too seriously. In the first place, they are the result of a trick engineered by Mr. Blanton. His request that the House sustain his arbitrary position came while Representative Norton, chairman of the District Committee, was in New Jersey. The few members of the House who are sufficiently informed to discuss the matter effectively were taken by surprise. Moreover, the Texan occupied 55 minutes of the hour allotted for debate, giving his colleagues a completely distorted view of the questions on which they later voted. It is evident that the real issues underlying this controversy were not presented to the House.

For this reason alone the Senate conferees will be fully justified in insisting upon a showdown. But there is a far more important aspect of the controversy. Apparently the House conferees are willing to recede on 84 Senate amendments if the Senate in turn will permit them to reduce the Federal contribution by $3,000,000, abolish character education and punish the "damned doctors." To the uninformed 84 concessions for three may appear to be a fair compromise. Actually, however, this proposal would inflict a flagrant injustice upon the District.

As passed by the House, the local appropriation bill would have created a deficit of more than $2,000,000 in the District budget. With the so-called lump-sum reduced and the appropriations increased by the Senate's amendments, the prospective deficit would be substantially larger. Under the law the District Commissioners would be compelled to boost the tax rate to cover the total expenditures. In other words, the default of Congress in its obligation toward the Nation's Capital would impose a new tax burden upon local residents who are already contributing more municipal revenue on a per capita basis than the residents of any comparable American city.

In these circumstances the Senate conferees can not yield without sacrificing the principles of equity and fairness to prejudice and demagoguery. For too many years the Senate has temporized with this untenable attitude on the part of a few obstinate politicians in the House. It is time for the issue to be brought to a head. If the deadlock continues long enough and causes sufficient inconvenience to Congress and the President, it may result in the development of some rational formula for division of the Capital City's expenses. With this objective in view, the Senate as well as the District, should be willing to fight Blantonism to a finish.

Taxes For Revenue.

President Roosevelt is said to be dissatisfied with the Senate Finance Committee's compromise tax bill on the ground that it will not produce as much revenue as he had requested. The majority members of the committee are, therefore, considering various alternative plans to levy graduated taxes upon undistributed corporate earnings, more nearly akin to the provisions of the House bill.

If the President were primarily interested in the revenue aspects of his tax program, it is difficult to believe that he would advocate the imposition of punitively high taxes upon corporate surplus. He would turn instead to general sales taxes or special excise levies upon gross income which could be relied upon to yield abundant revenue. We must eventually resort to taxes of this sort, however undesirable they may seem in theory. In practice they afford a straightforward method of spreading the tax burden over the masses of the people who in the long run must pay for the cost of maintaining the Government as a going concern.

This hard necessity cannot be escaped by trying futilely to make a few rich individuals supply all the additional revenue needed. Yet that in effect is the intention behind the House bill which would force the distribution of earned surpluses to be taxed as dividends in the hands of stockholders. The Treasury is counting upon the concentration of a large percentage of these dividends in the hands of individuals in the very high income tax brackets.

It is, however, extremely doubtful whether the House bill will yield much, if any more revenue, than would be collected under the existing corporation taxes. Senator Couzens said in a recent radio address, "I do not believe that the Treasury Department has, or if it has, it did not submit it to the committee so that I understood, any adequate information as to what brackets of income the dividends would fall in, if and when distributed by the corporations." George O. May, a well known accountant and war-time adviser to the Treasury, appearing as a witness before the Finance Committee, charged that the methods employed in computing returns from the taxes on undistributed profits greatly exaggerated estimated yields. His trenchant criticism has not been refuted by the Treasury's experts, who plainly failed to convince the committee of the wisdom of this untried experiment.

Other witnesses pointed out that returns under the House bill would fluctuate violently from year to year because taxable dividends would be swollen in good years and would shrink rapidly in periods of depression. Apart, therefore, from the grave social and economic objections to the plan to force the disbursement of corporate surpluses, the weight of expert testimony indicates that such taxes are a most uncertain source of revenue.

In view of the careful study given by the committee to the House bill before rejecting it for a less objectionable alternative plan, the Senators ought to resist efforts to force a reversal of their position. If the Administration is sincerely eager to cut the deficit it ought to abandon its ill-advised attempt to "reform" corporate dividend policies and have the courage to levy the kind of taxes that will yield adequate revenues without seriously retarding industrial recovery.

Bigger And Better Racket.

Government employes are receiving letters from the Democratic National Committee urging them to send $2.50 for a 1936 Convention Book so that "we can enter the campaign with a substantial war chest." It's the same old racket, of course, that has been going on for years under one guise or another. The only difference is that this year, because of the billions of public dollars that are being distributed and the consequent added thousands on Federal pay rolls, the racket has assumed record proportions.

From a strictly legal point of view, there can be no criticism of the Convention Book "appeals." The law forbids only "officers or employes" of the United States to solicit "any assessment, subscription or contribution for any political purpose whatever." By careful design this letter, intended to shake down Government employes, was signed by the secretary of the Democratic National Committee, and not by Postmaster General Farley, who is chairman of that committee. Such is not the case, however, with the much more sweeping "appeals" that are going out to relief workers throughout the country "urging" them to join local Democratic clubs, to subscribe to fly-by-night political publications, to contribute to all manner of campaign funds.

The "appeals" in these cases are reported to be pressed generally not by unofficial Democratic committeemen but by altogether official foremen, timekeepers and other deputies of the supervisors of the various emergency relief projects. For those interested, the Federal law prescribes as punishment for such practices a fine not to exceed $5,000 or a maximum prison term of three years, or both.

Accent On Quint.

Though "they toil not, neither do they spin," the five young ladies of Callander, Canada, are today celebrating their second birthday with assets of nearly a quarter million dollars. The Misses Dionne cannot even make a legible X on the dotted line, yet they have indorsed everything from contented cows to calico cats. This, in addition to movie contracts, has made it possible for their lullabies to be played on the cash register.

All roads in Canada lead to the Dionnes. From five red, wizened, and unexpected guests of Oliva and Elzire, the quints have blossomed into the most photographed and famous children in the world. Yvonne lisps "le docteur" and the sound is heard round the world. Marie learns to walk and a thousand shoemakers rush forward with free samples. Yet for all the interest taken in them by the public, very few people have ever learned how to pronounce correctly their last name, their doctor's name, or event the word "quintuplets."

Radio announcers call them quin-tew-plets and quin-tup-lets by turn. Their surname is sometimes accented on the first syllable and sometimes on the last. And the proper pronunciation of Dafoe leaves the majority of people as stumped as the doctor himself was on the night of May 28, 1934.

Dionne is pronounced Dee-on and Dafoe is Day-fo. But probably neither of these would ever have been heard of if it had not been for the word "quintuplets," which is quint-up-lets, accent on the quint. With so much emphasis these days on the fine progress being made by the babies, let it not be said of their public that it is any more lax in learning.

No government can long exist with half the people supporting it and the other half holding it up.

The biggest objection to a third political party is that it would make three too many.

Soil Conservation.

From the Dallas Morning News.

One of the most gratifying developments of the last year or two is the rapid awakening of Americans to the importance of soil conservation. Last year's duststorms and this spring's floods have brought graphically to the Nation's attention the almost forgotten problem of vanishing soil.

Two billion dollars a year is the tribute Americans pay to erosion by wind and water. Misused soil is washed or blown away in a few seasons, but it takes Nature 400 years to restore a single inch of topsoil. Most farmers are now erosion-conscious and are co-operating with the Soil Conservation Service of the Department of Agriculture. The projects of this agency, soon to be increased to 350, serve as practical examples of means which individual farmers can use in combating the destructive force of erosion.

The "Walk Lights."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

The feeble attempts made by our officials at regulating traffic and pedestrians are nothing but absurd. The present speed limit is much too slow, and the recently installed lights are ridiculous. We have been hearing and reading of the squawks raised by the officials concerning the possible decrease in the District of Columbia appropriation, yet they waste money by installing so-called walk lights.

Mayor McNair of Pittsburgh was ridiculed while here in Washington, and perhaps justly so, but he could certainly teach Mr. Allen and Mr. Van Duzer something about traffic regulation. In Pittsburgh, where traffic moves at the rate of 45 miles per hour or more, the lights are arranged to give the pedestrians an opportunity to cross the intersections. The lights, when changing from green to red, first change like our lights to green and caution. Then before changing to red the green light goes out, leaving the caution light on at all four lights. The cars are allowed to go through when both the green and caution lights are on, but the intersection must be cleared when the caution light alone is on, giving the pedestrians a chance to cross at all four corners.

I do not know the cost of regulating traffic in this manner, but it seems logical to conclude that it would be less expensive than installing the new-fangled walk lights. In addition, the speed limit could be raised with this system of traffic lights, which would make it necessary for the pedestrians to obey the lights.

Abundant Life For Locusts.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

As a citizen tremendously interested in the efforts of the present Administration to extend its strangle hold upon the American people through the use of the public treasury, may I suggest one of the best fields for boondoggling, which I fear has been overlooked. We are having the 17-year locusts now in very large numbers. But no one knows just what the numbers are.

Could not four worthy Democrats be assigned to each tree in Washington to count the host and then provide some plan, possibly under Dr. Tugwell's department, that would offer a more abundant life for our visitors?

On Running The Universe.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

The question of who controls the universe is a rather ponderous one to raise while we are all busy stirring the political porridge. But Dr. A. H. Compton, of the University of Chicago, has gone and done it. Leaving his laboratory and mounting the pulpit last Sunday, Dr. Compton announced that "up to the dawn of social conscience, God held in his own hands the whole responsibility for evolution of life on this planet. Gradually this responsibility is being shifted to our shoulders. As science advances, it seems inevitable that this transfer of authority will approach completeness."

The impending abdication of the Creator is exciting news. Think of the scramble of applicants for the job—Kemal, Mussolini, Roosevelt, Hitler, Stalin and the numerous embryonic world chauffeurs bobbing up here and there. Dr. Compton fails to fix the date of the "dawn of social conscience." Was it in the Garden of Eden or in 1932?

Anyhow, the idea of man running the whole creation is not new. Forty years ago, in company with a medical acquaintance, I visited an insane asylum. During the visit one of the inmates informed me that he once "had charge of the whole universe for three years while God was sick." He couldn't recall just which three years they were. Otherwise I should have checked up on him to see how well the job was done.

Should Have Read "Flout."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Ha! You've done it again! "It has been several years since anyone has 'flaunted' a Congressional committee" the way Dr. Townsend did in the right-hand column of The Post of May 22.

Still, in view of its general readableness and fine political editorials, I shall not turn completely against The Post until I see in one of its headlines "Moron Attacks Girl." But when that happens, look out!

"Rugged Individualism."

To The Editor of The Post—Sir:

We live in an age of slogans and aphorisms, many of which have become hackneyed and meaningless expressions.

The one that is resounding from the speaker's stand, flying through the air and flashing from the pages of the daily newspaper today is "rugged individualism." That expression is being used in a time when there is less opportunity for the average citizen to practice it than in any other period of our national history. The rugged individualists of our business history have built a system that has made it impossible for the majority of the people, who came after them, to follow in their footsteps.

I have had occasion to check the experiences of scores of men in business who were trying to follow the path of rugged individualism, but were driven from the field by the "regimented organizations" of business controlled by syndicates a thousand miles away.

Chain groceries, operated by bankers and munition manufacturers in great centers of finance, have destroyed most of the rugged individualists in small business. I heard a man delivering a speech calling for rugged individualism and deploring the Government's activities in trying to bring about social security, who himself had lost all of his possessions in his endeavor to practice rugged individualism in the face of regimented business controlled by an impersonal directorate.

The very practices of many of those crying for a return of rugged individualism blocks the pathway for such a return.

Rugged individualism in this modern civilization has been largely destroyed by the education and philosophy of the times. In the first place, it is unsocial in practice and undemocratic in principle. We cannot harmonize Christianity, democracy and rugged individualism.

There is a vast difference between rugged individualism and individual initiative. You can have individual initiative in a democracy, but not rugged individualism in the truest sense. Let us get our thinking straight and not be driven off our feet by dead platitudes.

Georgia And The Debts.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

The letter of George E. Gary from Georgia in regard to England and other countries paying their war debts is most amusing to one who knows the facts. Many years ago Georgia and other Southern States repudiated the payment of interest and principal on millions of dollars' worth of bonds owed to English bondholders. So I would suggest to George E. Gary that Georgia and these other States should set a good example to England by paying these bonds. These bonds were for actual money loaned, whereas the bonds owing by England to the United States were for goods at enormously high war prices.

Incidentally, England is perfectly willing to pay the United States back the value of these bonds in goods at present market prices, but the United States tariff laws prevent this. The balance of trade is against England.

Now failing Georgia's repayment of the above-mentioned debt, I suggest that she cede the Hawaiian Islands to England. This, of course, sounds absurd, but it is not nearly so absurd as the proposition Mr. Gary makes in regard to England ceding Canada to the United States, because England does not own one inch of Canada (ask any Canadian); whereas Georgia is part owner of the Hawaiian Islands and helps to govern these islands through Congress, whereas the British Parliament has no say whatsoever in Canadian affairs. But of course if Mr. Gary thinks a payment in land should be made, why not give up part of Georgia to these English bondholders. At least she would be giving something away that she owned.

Patriotism Vs. Saluting.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Is there no way of stopping this idiotic "salute the flag" business?

I am an American and profoundly grateful that my many ancestors had the good sense to get out of the European mess and come over here to build up a new country. I am proud that some of them played prominent parts in the early history of the country and, on the whole, have fine records of public service. I do not think we have a perfect form of government, but human nature being what it is, I prefer the kind we have to any other yet offered and have a belief that we'll improve it bit by bit.

Having made my declaration of faith, I want to emphasize my protest against "saluting the flag." I happen to have a genuine love of the Stars and Stripes; I never come into New York Harbor and see it without having my throat swell with pride as it waves in the breeze, and I never see it anywhere unexpectedly without feeling the same rush of affectionate emotion—exactly the same feeling I have for my wife and family after even a brief separation.

But as an American there is nothing in the world that I would resent more than having to get up in public and recite an oath declaring my love for my wife and family. As for having to give frequent public and formal gestures of respect and affection to them under force of law, I have no doubt that I should have to desert them eventually in hatred if they forced me to such a performance.

Affection and respect are not things that can be created to order. Any crook and liar can go through the forms and will do so without turning a hair; I have no doubt that most of the late public enemies were unctuous saluters of the flag. Such obeisance is worse than worthless. It brings the flag and what it stands for in the minds of those who love it to a level of mockery and contempt.

Instead of forcing a perfunctory lip service and ceremonial gesture of obeisance on those who are really indifferent we should keep the flag from becoming a rag in which anyone can hide himself, keep its use and display for occasions and persons worthy of it.

CITIZEN.
Lanham, Md., May 26.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

The publicity given the children who fail to salute the flag is out of proportion to the occasion. Those children are within their constitutional rights and the American Legion and religious organizations have no right to meddle or comment. The school board and P.-T. A. should be the only ones to interfere.

All this demand for the teachers to take an oath and the pupils to salute the flag is just a form of Hitlerism and is depriving citizens of individual liberty.

It is all very disgusting to liberty-loving people and certainly will not make anyone "patriotic."

The Post Impressionist

Post Office, Thursday.

YOU know how, at a national political convention, where they have to nominate somebody for the Presidency, they call the roll of States in alphabetical order—as if any sort of order could have much show at a national political convention! . . . Well, of course, Alabama comes first. And then the chairman of the Alabama delegation frequently says something like:

"Alabama yields to Such-and-Such a State."

That's the way with this columnist today. He surrenders the floor to three distinguished personages—to:

J. Edgar Hoover, Director, Federal Bureau of Investigation, U. S. Department of Justice — better known to an appreciative public as No. 1 G-Man;

An eminent officer of the AAA—who, however, prefers to maintain anonymity, because of the delicacy of his position toward the subject he herein discusses;

And Miss Lisa Gardiner, danseuse, who needs no further introduction.

* * *

Place aux dames—Ladies first!

* * *

Miss Gardiner:

"The Post Impressionist—Sir: What can be done to preserve the English language? For years I have meekly reconciled myself to reading with one eye on the book and the other feverishly searching a dictionary. I have allowed the misuse of 'following' for 'after,' 'around' for 'about'—'creative,' 'contact,' 'sanction' and a lot of other thin edges of the white elephant. But the limit of my endurance has been reached by 'soft-cooked egg.' . . .

"Can you suggest anything? We might, of course, adopt Esperanto!

"LISA GARDINER."

* * *

Dear Miss Gardiner, you don't tell the half of it. What about "thot," "thru" and "tho?" What about "nite?" And, oh, what—what — about certain cute little "shoppes," and those people who not only use "ye" for "the," but pronounce it as they spell it?

* * *

Our AAA official is touched because we lately published the letter of another correspondent who, far from being an AAA official, was just an AAA employe, and who thought the AAA all too human. We spread forth that letter without prejudice. We even referred it to Miss Mary Haworth. But the official is so upset by it that he addresses his retort to "Miss Mary Haworth, Editor of The Post-Impressionist." And much as we admire Miss Haworth——

* * *

However, the official:

"To anyone who reflects on the conglomerate personnel comprising the AAA, the amazing thing is the amount of work that is 'turned out' and not the paucity of labor. We have in the audit department lawyers, doctors, dentists, civil engineers, electrical engineers, statisticians, C. P. A.'s, college students, political hangers-on and representatives of about every occupation known to man. Some of these people have earned . . . $32,000 a year and deserved it. Some, on the other hand, have never received more than the $1,620 they now earn, and have been overpaid at that. All . . . sit behind old, dilapidated desks doing routine, tiresome work . . . But the majority of them work hard when we have work in hand to do.

"If anyone doubts this, let me ask him to come and see me. I will gladly show him my records—I happen to be one of the maligned 'overseers' . . .

* * *

"Another thing that has irked my sense of justice is the flow of disparaging remarks that has been published anent the gambling, loan sharks, courting, etc., that occurs within this building. Certainly they exist here . . . But what large department is free of them? . . .

"Most of the complaining is done by people who are not qualified for better positions . . . As for those outside the department who criticize us, all I ask of them is that they 'look before they jump.'"

* * *

The Post-Impressionist will do better. He'll promise not to jump!

* * *

Thus, lastly, to Director Hoover.

* * *

Director Hoover:

"I have read with a great deal of interest your remarks concerning the value of universal fingerprinting . . . There are certainly many benefits to be derived in connection with the establishment of universal civilian fingerprinting. As honest citizens become more fully acquainted with the benefits to be derived, they submit their fingerprints for inclusion in the civilian identification unit, resulting in the marked increase in the number of such prints, as pointed out in your article."

* *

You see, we had said that lots of people hesitated to send their fingerprints to the F. B. I., because they thought it might lead to general police espionage. But we told Director Hoover that, for our part, we had lived long in lands where the police kept much closer tabs on everybody than mere fingerprinting could keep—and that we never felt the "espionage" except when impelled to do something we ought not to do!

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler.

Bad Business.

I suggest that the editorial and advertising departments of many of our newspapers should look into the night club and roadhouse business and decide whether they want to continue to be parties to a system of entertainment which often serves merely as a come-on for jewel thieves, blackmailers, con-men and gambling-house operators.

• • •

Of course, this is not to say that every rural chicken reel or urban cocktail parlor is necessarily a den of sin or that the wheels are spinning in all of them. But not to back down very far, I will still insist that many city resorts which are constantly receiving free mention in the papers in a tone of voice which makes them seem attractive are the hunting grounds of thieves, swindlers and predatory ladies of interest to the police and are well understood to be such by all who know anything about them.

I do not go so far as to say that it is the duty of a newspaper to lead each reader around by the hand like a nursemaid guiding a child. The people who frequent such places are supposed to be grown up and to know their way around, and if they insist upon being suckers that is their business. But a paper ballyhoos a place which is a joint by printing pictures of the show proper on the proprogram and social prattle about those present—that comes pretty close to aiding and abetting. Moreover, given this encouragement, the criminals who run the plants grow stronger and bolder and presently fall to scrapping and bombing, and then we have crime waves and scandals in the police force, the sheriff's office and the county prosecutor's department. At this we run pictures of the midnight raid, the confiscated wheels and crap tables and editorials asking "Can Such Things Be?"

Some of the people of Louisville, Ky., are upset every year to read in out-of-town newspapers descriptions of the dives which operate openly on the Indiana side of the Ohio River as accessories to the Derby celebration. The promoters of these traps are all criminals operating at the connivance of crooked public officials of Indiana, and they generally arrange to bring in, strictly as bait for the suckers, famous Broadway entertainers who are publicized as distinguished artists to the complete neglect of their true function, which is to create publicity and attract victims. Criminals draw other criminals and the conditions on the Indiana side during Derby week are so flagrant that it is no exaggeration to describe the occasion as the Crooks' Old Home Week there. On the Kentucky side the police are a little more strict, but they can't do business in Indiana, and the yonder shore is only a few minutes away by cab.

• • • •

The crookedest town in the United States today is Miami Beach, Fla., a beautiful winter resort which has simply been handed over to the underworld of New York, Chicago, Detroit and St. Louis in the last ten years. It started well with fine intentions. Millions were spent on good hotels and beautiful homes, but the local politicians were grafters, and some of the local business men thought it would be a good idea to let in just a few criminals from the North to run gambling rooms as a diversion for the visitors. But in very little time Miami Beach was overrun with the most notorious racketeers and thieves in the United States and became the winter quarters of Lucky Luciano, Johnny Torrio and Al Capone among a thousand others.

In the northerly latitudes in summer the dives have a tendency to move out into the leafy rural country where sheriffs and small town policemen are cheap and the prosecutors are able to stall and fumble through the short season without going into serious action. But the owners of homes make a mistake if they let them light, for they soon dig in, and it takes a local political convulsion to drive them out.

Gambling, as such, is not necessarily bad. But gambling houses in American communities where the laws forbid are criminal institutions run by racketeers with the consent of criminals in public office, and nobody can get around that.

Associated Power Output.

New York, May 27 (AP).—For the week ended May 16, Associated Gas & Electric System reports net electric output of 75,936,829 units, which is an increase of 12.8 per cent above the comparable week a year ago. For the four weeks to date output was up 11.7 per cent above the corresponding period of last year.

Still Hell Bent

By James P. Warburg

Author of "Hell Bent for Election," Formerly One of President Roosevelt's Financial Advisers.

Chapter Five.

"At Least He Has Tried."

Having dealt now with two of the three widely held, convictions, which—if not exploded—will probably re-elect Mr. Roosevelt, we come to the third and last. I stated it, you remember, as follows:

"While Mr. Roosevelt may have made a lot of mistakes, while he may have shown himself as superficial and impetuous, he has at least tried, and, if re-elected, will go on trying."

This is perhaps the most widespread, and therefore, the most potent of the three, and for this reason it deserves all the attention we can give it.

Whereas, in the case of the first two arguments, I have endeavored to show that they are unsound because they are based upon a misconception of underlying fact, the same is not true in regard to the third. The facts in this case are admitted.

Mr. Roosevelt has undoubtedly "tried," and, if re-elected, will undoubtedly "continue trying."

My purpose is to demonstrate, if I can, that this is not a sound argument upon which to vote for him.

I say this for four major reasons:

1. Because in his "trying" Mr. Roosevelt confuses mere activity, or change, with progress.

2. Because Mr. Roosevelt's "trying" is based upon no steadfast adherence to any discoverable basic principles.

3. Because in the past, when Mr. Roosevelt has clearly defined a specific purpose, he has almost invariably accompanied such a definition with a proposal for action which, if adopted, would accomplish the exact opposite. And, finally,

4. Because, leaving aside past performance, the purpose which Mr. Roosevelt avows now, in 1936—and for which he will presumably "go on trying," if re-elected—seem to me quite clearly purposes which are not consistent with the best interests of the country. Particularly, it seems to me, they are not consistent with that very objective which is the most sympathetic thing about Mr. Roosevelt—the objective of helping the less fortunate elements of our population.

Confuses Activity With Progress.

The first three reasons above stated will not be fully elaborated here. I have given the basis for them as clearly as I can in "Hell Bent for Election."

Nor do I think it is any longer necessary to prove their validity to a majority of the American people.

Even Mr. Roosevelt's supporters realize that he confuses activity with progress—or, if you like, confuses doing something with getting something done.

Even Mr. Roosevelt's supporters recognize his lack of steadfastness to principles, and I do not see how they can deny his repudiation of promise.

As a matter of fact they do not deny it. But they defend it by saying that Mr. Roosevelt's campaign promises were entirely sincere, and that he was compelled to repudiate them because of completely altered circumstances. And many people—among them some of the most fair-minded—are inclined to feel a little bit this way.

It is true that Mr. Roosevelt was confronted with an extremely critical situation when he took office—a situation that demanded an extraordinary degree of courage and wisdom.

No one will deny that Mr. Roosevelt showed courage.

Few would claim—and I am not one of the few—that they would have acted more wisely under the same circumstances.

But that is not the point here.

It was after the most critical moments were over that Mr. Roosevelt began to veer away from the principles for which he had stood and upon which he had been elected.

It was after the real emergency had passed that he began to develop his notions of centralized bureaucratic control and extravagant public spending.

I for one would say that there were no sudden or drastic developments which justified his wholesale repudiation of previously avowed principles. But my opinion may be biased.

Farley's Statement Interesting Evidence.

Fortunately, however, we have a statement made by one whose bias is in favor of Mr. Roosevelt and who ought to know him if anybody knows him—a statement which, if correct, furnishes some interesting evidence as to whether Mr. Roosevelt was forced by circumstances to abandon principles in which he believed or abandoned them because he avowed them merely for campaign purposes.

Here is the statement. It was made by Postmaster General James A. Farley before the Rotary Club of Detroit and was quoted in the Detroit Free Press of June 18, 1934, as follows:

"Critics have sought to convey the impression that the President did not know what it was all about; that he was being pulled and hauled in all directions by impractical theorists so taken by their own pet ideas that they gave no heed to their effect on the Nation's welfare.

"I know of no man with a more definite mind than President Roosevelt's. I know of no executive less likely to be swayed by impractical theories.

"Let me tell you that there was nothing sporadic about this program. It was worked out in Mr. Roosevelt's mind before he was even nominated for the Presidency. He has known all the time just what he was driving at. There is nothing impulsive about him except the impulse to serve his country."

Note well the phrase: "It was worked out in Mr. Roosevelt's mind before he was even nominated for the Presidency."

Let us pause for a moment to consider what that means.

It means that Mr. Roosevelt had no intention of balancing the budget and reducing the cost of government by 25 per cent—not that he intended to do so and later found that it was impossible.

It means that Mr. Roosevelt had in mind abandoning the gold standard, devaluing the dollar and abrogating the gold clause, at the very time that he was promising the opposite and indignantly repudiating any suggestion that his "sound money" stand was ambiguous.

Had Entire NRA Plan in Mind.

It means that Mr. Roosevelt had in mind the whole NRA adventure and told the country nothing about it—and so forth and so on.

Mr. Farley, in his enthusiasm of defending the President against one charge, lays him open to a far more serious criticism—a criticism that I myself would never make.

But I think Mr. Farley perhaps overstates the case when he says that the whole program was worked out in the President's mind before he was even nominated for the Presidency.

I doubt very much whether he had a complete and fully matured plan of action in mind—to believe that would be to believe that he deliberately deceived the American people in order to be elected.

But I do believe that he had in mind a picture of himself as a man to whom extraordinary powers should be entrusted—powers which should not be entrusted to any other President, but which could and should be entrusted to him because he would make such excellent use of them.

Apart from that conviction, I doubt whether Mr. Roosevelt had many specific plans or intentions, and I think it was his confidence in his own judgment—his belief that he would find the right answer to whatever problem might arise—that led him so gaily to abandon the majority of his pre-election promises.

But, whether you take my answer or Mr. Farley's, the argument that necessity compelled the repudiation of promises falls to the ground.

And now, as to my third reason for not accepting the "at least he has tried" argument, let me repeat this reason as previously stated:

"Because in the past, when Mr. Roosevelt has defined a specific purpose, he has almost invariably accompanied such a definition with a proposal for action, which, if adopted, would accomplish almost the exact opposite."

This too, it seems to me, is now apparent to a majority of the American people.

They remember what the NRA was supposed to accomplish and how it accomplished the opposite.

Public Remembers What Has Happened.

They remember the President's statement of what the CWA was to accomplish—and what happened.

They remember what was said about WPA and PWA, and they know what has been the result.

Each one of these proposals was heralded as being about to give employment to so and so many millions—I have not bothered to add up the total of the prognostications—but the fact remains that the relief rolls are now greater than ever and that re-employment through natural sources has been impeded.

People remember too—vaguely—what was promised as the result of the famous gold and silver juggling—Passamaquoddy—the Florida Ship Canal—and the Potato Control Act.

And if my point here in regard to past performance is not sufficiently driven home to be convincing, I shall nevertheless pause no longer over this third reason, because the same thing is true—and can be shown to be true of what Mr. Roosevelt now promises for the future.

Past performance is, I think, a legitimate guide to use in appraising future performance, but, in the last analysis, we are going to vote this November not so much upon what we think of past performance as we are upon what we may reasonably expect in the way of future performance.

That brings me to my fourth and most important reason for not subscribing to the argument, "At least he tried."

$4,000,000,000, if everything, including relief, is figured in.

Despite the large bonus outlay, it is understood the Treasury will have adequate funds to run the Government until September 15, next financing date.

The June issues will take care of the refund of $686,000,000 in 1¼ per cent notes maturing June 15 as well as $364,000,000 of 3¼ per cent notes falling due August 1.

In building up a cash balance, the Treasury has stepped up the weekly issue of $50,000,000 in bills, offered in order to meet the same amount of maturing indebtedness, to $100,000,000. Indications are that this practice will be continued until July 15. The cash balance will be augmented by June income tax quarterly payments by about $375,000,000.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips.

The Bullfighters' Union.

Labor troubles, believe it or not, are slowing up the bullfighting business. Spain has a bullfighters' union and a few days ago 11, including 2 star matadors, staged a walkout in a crowded arena.

• • • •

It precipitated a riot and something of a government crisis. Everybody was upset except the bulls.

• • • •

The Spanish bullfighters refused to appear because the management had hired a Mexican matador, who not only had no union card, but who constituted unfair foreign competition.

• • • •

It looks as if romance and adventure had fled the bull ring to be replaced by organized labor, Local No. 35, the closed shop and better working conditions for man and beast.

• • • •

We may yet hear the toreadors demanding shorter fences and the five-bull week.

• • • •

• • • •

Possible Report of a Future Bullfight.

Madrid.—Sunday's gala bullfight was marred by serious labor trouble. The trouble began when Corribanas, billed as the feature fighter of the day, entered the ring without a union card.

• • • •

The situation was complicated, especially for Corribanas, due to the fact the union leaders made their demand that he produce his card while he was fighting one of the bulls.

• • • •

It was no time to look for a union card, even if he had it.

• • • •

Corribanas shouted that he was a union bullfighter in good standing, but the leaders insisted that he show credentials or leap out of the ring. Corribanas leaped out of the ring, but it is still a subject of dispute whether it was a surrender to unionism or to the bull.

More than $18,000,000 is taken from America every year by the Irish Sweepstakes. This just goes to show the money to be made in this country illegally and with the Government's determined opposition.

• • • •

Velepleta, another matador, was rushed in with union approval, but after being chased all over the ring, turned in his card and announced that he was through unless the union changed bulls.

Senate Committee Establishes Roosevelt as Relief Dictator

to a 15 per cent leeway by the President, are:

Highways, roads and streets, $413,250,000.

Public buildings, $156,750,000.

Parks and other recreational facilities, including buildings therein, $156,750,000.

Public utilities, including sewer systems, water supply and purification, airports and other transportation facilities, $171,000,000.

Flood control and other conservation, $128,250,000.

Assistance for educations, professional and clerical persons (in the House bill this is called "white collar projects"), $85,500,000.

Women's projects, $85,500,000.

National Youth Administration, $71,250,000.

Loans and relief to farmers, $85,500,000.

This last item, which is expected to be administered by Tugwell, previously had been listed as "rural rehabilitation and relief to farmers." The new designation limits its use and apparently prevents continuance of land acquisition, resettlement and suburban housing beyond amounts already available for these purposes. Under the comparatively free grant of power to the President, however, it may be possible for Tugwell to administer at least parts of other earmarked appropriations.

In somewhat changed language, the Senate committee retained the section of the bill which would prevent giving relief to aliens illegally in the United States.

The section providing for prevailing wages, which was kept out of last year's bill because of strong opposition of the Administration, was retained, with the power to fix wages in the hands of the President instead of Hopkins.

Another new section provides that the fact that a relief worker receives a soldier bonus shall not be considered as determining actual need for employment.

From RFC Fund.

Money transferred to the Public Works Administration comes from a revolving fund from the sale of municipal bonds by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. The bonds are those received as security for loans by the PWA. This money may be used for grants or loans not to exceed 30 per cent of the cost of projects costing more than $100,000 and not more than 45 per cent in any case. Previous loans and grants have generally been 45 per cent.

The committee rejected the proposal of Republican Senators that relief money be turned over to the States for local administration. A fight for this change is expected to be made in the Senate.

Simultaneously with reporting the bill, the committee made public a transcript of hearings in which Hopkins, Tugwell and Ickes testified. Hopkins told the committee that he now favored payment of prevailing wages, against which Chairman Glass (Democrat), of Virginia, fought in behalf of the Administration last year.

"You have changed your point of view," Glass told Hopkins, "and I have reason to regret that your point of view in the first instance was utterly wrong, and I stood in the committee here and on the floor of the Senate, and vehemently advocated what you now say is something that I should not have advocated."

"Well, I would not put it that way, Senator," Hopkins said.

"That's the way organized labor puts it and condemns me for it," Glass retorted. "I am not sensitive to condemnation, because I usually go my own way whether organized labor approves it or not, but they have condemned me for accepting your theory, which later turned out to be incorrect in practice."

Hopkins told the committee that additional funds would be needed before the end of the next fiscal year unless employment improves. He suggested that $500,000,000 more might be needed. He added that his organization was planning to reexamine the whole subject of eligibility of persons on relief with a view to reducing the rolls.

Hopkins was emphatic in his insistence that under the terms of the House bill none of the money could be turned over to Tugwell. President Roosevelt had indicated he interpreted the measure in the opposite manner, but with the changed wording there appears to be no longer any question that Tugwell can get money.

Hopkins told the committee that administrative charges for all forms of relief average 10 per cent. He said it was less than that figure for the works program. He said he did not think 10 per cent excessive.

The relief administrator, answering charges that an attempt was made to inject politics into relief in the Borough of Queens, New York, said that local officials and not Federal officials were attempting to play politics there.

Ickes told the committee that the work of his organization had been speeded up by decentralization. He said it had $780,000,000 worth of projects available and approved.

"It is obvious," Ickes told the committee, "that a curtailment in the construction of public works would necessarily cause unemployment, not only in the construction industry itself but in allied industries as well.

"A continuance of the PWA program on a scale calculated to dovetail with the present schedule of construction will afford a basis for continuous employment of a substantial portion of skilled workers in industry and commerce."

He said that PWA makes five jobs indirectly for every job on the construction site.

Tugwell was questioned closely as to the cost per family of resettlement projects. He submitted a table of such financially unsuccessful projects, costing from $1,140 a family in West Virginia to a project at Sioux Falls, S. Dak., costing $20,520 per family. He revealed that the much-discussed Arthurdale project has cost the Government $10,370 for each family resettled. The Government has spent $1,711,200 there to care for 165 families.

While he listed these projects as financially unsuccessful, he submitted a list of planned projects costing as much or more. One in Missouri, he said, will cost $11,940 per family, and one in Indiana, $11,440.

Holt Lays Loss In Patronage to Attack on WPA

But W.Va. Senator Will Not Retreat, He Declares; Hopkins Assailed.

Charging he had been stripped of Federal patronage because of his repeated charges that the WPA is influenced by political considerations, Senator Rush D. Holt (Democrat), of West Virginia, yesterday declared there "will be no retreat."

"No department head," his statement said, "can hold over me the patronage club that would make me vote against my belief. I was not elected by my people to trade their franchise in Congress for political favors."

Holt declared he "realized I would be punished for my attack on WPA," but asserted that "those responsible for it have made me more determined to carry on the fight."

Accused by Curtis.

Meanwhile, WPA Director Harry L. Hopkins was accused by Arthur M. Curtis, Republican national committeeman from Missouri, of being evasive and of "whitewashing" charges of politics in the administration of relief in Missouri. On Thursday Hopkins denied specific charges made by Curtis.

Curtis pointed out that his letter was accompanied by affidavits.

"I advised you that those affidavits had come to me entirely unsolicited," he said. "I had then and I have now no reason whatsoever to believe that any one of the persons executing these affidavits were wilfully, knowingly and intentionally committing perjury in relation to the statements contained therein and I believe they have stated the truth."

Only Day Intervened.

Curtis pointed out to Hopkins that only one working day intervened between the time Curtis made the charges and Hopkins answered them in detail.

"How many of the persons named in the affidavits did your investigators contact?" Curtis asked. "Was your investigation conducted by nonprejudiced, fair-minded individuals, or have you again swallowed the statements of your own representatives and refused to cause a fair and impartial investigation to be made?"

Hopkins avoided answering charges that Missouri relief is dominated by the Pendergast machine, Curtis added.

Army Guards Railway In Southern Austria

Vienna, May 27 (AP).—Detachments of regular army troops appeared unexpectedly tonight to guard railway stations throughout the Province of Styria and in other parts of southern Austria.

Officials declined to give an explanation of the troop movements as dissatisfaction continued to be expressed in political quarters over Prince Ernst von Starhemberg's refusal to disarm his private Heimwehr (home guard).

Treasury Tax Proposals

Outgrowth of Tuesday night's White House conference, when the President struck anew for the revolutionary tax philosophy of the House bill, the plans submitted yesterday by the Treasury would raise, respectively, $622,000,000 and $630,000,000 in additional revenue, compared with $560,000,00 produced by the Senate Committee's plan. If revenue is the President's prime aim, the $60,000,000-odd increase involved in the Treasury drafts is not enough to justify it, some members of the conservative Senate bloc argued.

The Treasury's "Plan No. 1," representing only a slight variation on a proposal hitherto suggested to the committee by Marriner S. Eccles, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, imposes total taxes ranging as high as 60 per cent where a corporation distributed no dividends.

Whereas the House bill repealed existing corporation income taxes (12½ to 15 per cent) before applying undistributed income taxes ranging up to 42½ per cent, the Treasury plan imposes undivided profits taxes on top of the existing corporation income tax. A $15,000 flat exemption, however, would be given to all corporations, to provide special treatment for small-income companies.

25 per cent on the first 20 per cent of corporate earnings withheld.

35 per cent on the second 20 per cent of earnings retained.

45 per cent on all profits withheld in excess of 40 per cent.

This plan entails repeal of existing capital stock and excess profits taxes leaving a net estimated additional revenue of $622,000,000.

Second Plan Laid to Black.

The second and somewhat more moderate tax plan presented by the Treasury is said to have been originally suggested by Senator Hugo L. Black (Democrat), of Alabama, at the White House tax conference.

This plan would continue the existing capital stock tax of $1.40 per $1,000 and the present excess profits tax, involving a total of some $168,000,000 in revenue.

Like the so-called Eccles plan, it would also continue the present 12½ to 15 per cent corporate income taxes, but provide a $15,000 flat exemption from surtaxes.

15 per cent on the first 20 per cent of earnings withheld by a company.

25 per cent on the second 20 per cent retained.

40 per cent on all earnings retained in excess of 40 per cent.

The Treasury said this would produce $630,000,000.

Neither of the plans made any mention of the proposed 4 per cent normal income tax on dividends, recommended by the President, and included in both the House and Senate bills. Senators were in disagreement over whether this omission was intended.

In a memorandum to the committee, the Treasury suggested that $5,000,000 more in revenue could be picked up if the percentage of intercorporate dividends now subject to taxation is increased from 10 per cent to 13 1-3 per cent. An additional $10,000,000 would be realized if 16 2-3 per cent of intercorporate dividends were made subject to taxation, the Treasury said.

Some Senators, who had been optimistically joining in Majority Leader Robinson's drive for adjournment by June 6, said last night the President's stand may result in a tie-up postponing adjournment indefinitely. Many saw in the move an effort to protect the fight for a high undistributed earnings tax to the Senate floor, over the recommendations of the committee, which is predominantly hostile to the philosophy behind the President's plan.

This reputed strategy is said to be based on the fact that more liberal sentiment prevails in the Senate as a whole than in the traditionally conservative Senate Finance Committee.

Opposition to the undistributed earnings tax was so strong in the committee that 12 members, a majority, voted against imposition of any tax on undivided profits at a higher rate than the 4 per cent levy to which dividends would be subjected.

Pledge Is Reported.

Recognizing their strength, this group acceded to a 7 per cent surtax only on condition that Chairman Pat Harrison and other Administration Senators would not carry their fight for a higher rate to the Senate floor. They are said to have received that assurance from Harrison. Whether the chairman, who is now ill with a sinus ailment, still feels himself bound to abide by that agreement was a moot question yesterday.

Senator George, who moved yesterday to approve the committee's own bill, despite the Treasury's recommendations, frankly told reporters he regarded the new proposals as even more harsh than the House schedules, against which the committee as a whole rebelled.

Before a vote can be had on his motion, when the committee meets again today, a host of substitute proposals, including the Treasury's new schedules, are expected to be offered, precipitating a controversy that may end all hope of an agreement this week.

Senator William H. King, of Utah, acting chairman in the absence of Harrison, and hotly opposed to high taxes on undivided profits, would make no forecasts as to when the committee might settle the controversy, but said that if any compromise is reached it is likely to incline more nearly to the committee's bill than to the drastic House rates.

King again took the Treasury to task for its estimates on the committee compromise tax plan, which the Utahan insist are at least $100,000,000 short. It was the alleged revenue deficiency in the Senate Committee bill which purportedly led to the White House conference.

"The plan we previously approved would produce all of the revenue the President said is needed, and more than is needed if we stopped some of this extravagant spending," King commented.

Previously he had called the caucus of committee Democrats to review briefly the meat of the White House discussion. No binding action was taken, but opposition was aired to steep surtaxes, and cushioned rates were urged for small and debt-ridden corporations. One plan considered, which may be further discussed in committee today, would apply graduated rates of corporate income tax to give preferential treatment to weaker concerns.

Committee members, who had waded through weeks of hearings and committee discussion before completing a bill they were ready to report before the President intervened, were not looking forward enthusiastically to renewal of the controversy. One Senator said the situation looked "hopeless;" another that "we are right back where we started."

In a telegram last night to Chairman Harrison, Dr. Hugh S. Magill, president of the American Federation of Investors, protested the latest Administration move.

"Of course all taxes on corporations must ultimately fall on the stockholders in these corporations," Magill wired from Chicago. "These millions of investors in the securities of American industries are willing to bear their fair share of taxation, but strenuously object to being unjustly discriminated against. We appeal to your committee on behalf of millions of investors who constitute a vast number of thrifty middle-class American citizens to deal fairly and justly with them in the preparation of this tax bill.

"We believe the tax imposed by the committee is too high. To increase it would be an outrage on investor-owned American industry. We respectfully urge that your committee will not yield to the demands of that radical element of society that would rob the thrifty by penalizing all private industry through confiscatory taxation."

New Film Week Will Introduce Notable Bills

'Tobacco Road' Held for Extra Performance Sunday Night.

The second week of the return engagement of "Tobacco Road," at the National Theater, has been so successful that an additional night performance will be given next Sunday. This will positively end the Washington run of the play and will mark Henry Hull's 804th performance in the role of Jeeter Lester, which he created on the Broadway stage. This extra performance also will end the season for this company presenting the Jack Kirkland dramatization of the Erskine Caldwell novel. There will, of course, be the customary Saturday matinee.

Ronald Colman, Claudette Colbert, Victor McLaglen and Rosalind Russell are the stellar members of the cast to be seen in the new Twentieth Century-Fox picturization of "Under Two Flags," adapted from the famous novel by Ouida, opening on the screen at Loew's Palace Theater tomorrow. This familiar story of Cigarette and the Foreign Legion has been filmed with a fine appreciation of its romantic as well as melodramatic possibilities and should ring up a hit at the box-office. Among the additional members of the large cast are such favorites as Herbert Mundin, C. Henry Gordon, Gregory Ratoff and Lumsden Hare.

Music will dominate the bill announced for the week beginning tomorrow at the Earle Theater. On the screen the major fetaure will be "It's Love Again," in which the stellar role is played by Jessie Matthews, foremost of the English singing and dancing stars. She will be supported by Robert Young in the principal masculine role. The stage portion of the program will be outlined by Winifred Shaw, "the lady in red," who was a visitor to the same stage just a year ago. Other acts will be presented by Gine, DeQuincey and Lewis, dancers; Freddie Craig, jr., with the "index mind," and the Honey Family. The Radio City Music Hall Glee Club is being held over for a second week.

Jan Kiepura and Gladys Swarthout are the pictured stars of "Give Us This Night," the next screen attraction at the Belasco Theater, following the long run of "Ecstasy." Two such extraordinary voices should insure the musical integrity of a picture that has been described as one of the foremost booked on Lafayette Square under the present Belasco policy. On the same bill will be included "The Plow That Broke the Plains," hailed as the finest of the United States Government's productions to date.

In "Till We Meet Again," the new screen feature opening at Loew's Fox Theater tomorrow, Herbert Marshall is the star, supported by Gertrude Michael, Lionel Atwill, Rod Le Rocque and Guy Bates Post. The story is vaguely described as a strong one of "love and devotion." On the stage Benny Meroff will appear with his celebrated orchestra in a return engagement as headliner of the vaudeville bill. In addition to his own instrumentalists, Meroff will present a long list of specialists, including Jack Marshall, Florence Gast, Larry Powell, Jeffrie Gill, the Swingtet, the McCarty Sisters, with Lanham and Lake; Babs Leval, Peter Ray and Meroff's Glee Club.

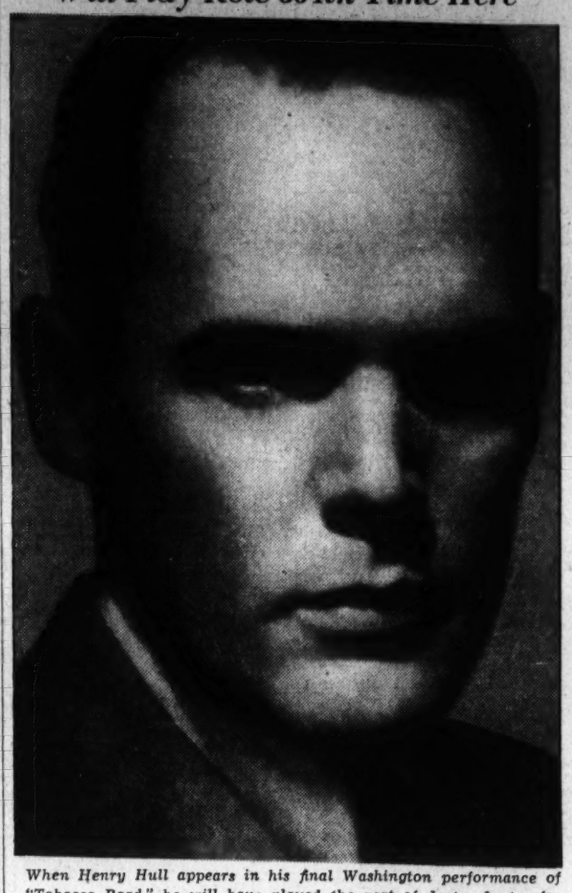
Wallace Beery, John Boles and Barbara Stanwyck are the pictured stars in "A Message to Garcia," which will open a repeat downtown engagement in the Columbia Theater beginning tomorrow. Based on the Elbert Hubbard essay on the value of those who unhesitatingly do their duty, this film play brings back vivid reminders of the Spanish-American War and Cuba's struggle for freedom. Short subjects and newsreel will complete the bill.

The Little Theater will continue the showing of "The Lives of Bengal Lancer" throughout the remainder of the current week. The principal roles are played by Gary Cooper, Franchot Tone, Sir Guy Standing and Richard Cromwell.

Irene Dunne, the star, Charles Winninger, Helen Morgan, Helen Westley, Allan Jones, Donald Cook, Paul Robeson and the others importantly cast are adding new luster to their names by the excellence of their work in "Show Boat," Universal's new picturization of the Edna Ferber novel, now in its second week at RKO-Keith's. This is one of the impressive productions of the season and richly deserves the overwhelming success that is attending its premiere local showing on Fifteenth street.

Seaside Park, at Chesapeake Beach, Md., will open its salt-water bathing pool tomorrow and have the bay resort in full operation for the holiday crowds on Saturday. All of the water resort's attractions are now running and fishing is reported excellent off the half-mile pier.

Will Play Role 804th Time Here



When Henry Hull appears in his final Washington performance of "Tobacco Road," he will have played the part of Jeeter Lester for the 804th time. This Jack Kirkland play, dramatized from the novel by Erskine Caldwell, now in its third Washington week since April 5, will be continued through Sunday night at the National Theater. Mr. Hull created the role of Jeeter in the original New York production of this sensational drama of the Georgia backwoods. The play will end its season here.

Barber Convicted On Morals Counts

Los Angeles, May 27 (AP).—Robert S. James, 39, master barber, was convicted today on three morals charges involving his pretty 21-year-old niece, Lois Wright.

James offered no defense, throwing himself on the mercy of the court. He was ordered to appear in court Monday for sentence.

Much of the prosecution testimony was made up of records of conversations between James and his niece obtained by a listening device secretly placed in James' home after the death of his fifth wife last August.

James faces trial next month on a charge that he and Charles Hope, former sailor, joined in an insurance money plot to drown Mrs. James after exposing her to rattlesnakes.

Aids of Roosevelt Chart July 4 Trip

White House and State officials worked yesterday on details of President Roosevelt's trip into Virginia July 3 and July 4, according to the Associated Press.

After a conference with Secretary Marvin McIntyre and Col. E. W. Starling at the White House, Adjt. Gen. S. Gardner Waller and Motor Vehicle Commissioner John Q. Rhodes said arrangements for the visit were "being worked out but are not yet complete."

The President is to deicate Shenandoah Natoinal Park on the afternoon of July 3, and will deliver his Fourth of July speech at Monticello, the home of Thomas Jefferson.

He has been invited by Jay Winston Johns to spend the night of July 3 at Ash Lawn, the home of James Monroe across the valley from Monticello, but his decision has not been announced.

It was considered likely the President would go to Richmond, or some point nearer the coast, by automobile after his address and board ship for a week-end cruise up the Chesapeake and Potomac.

Girl Admits Slaying Man; Mob Storms Jail

Altus, Okla., May 27 (AP).—A 19-year-old Negro girl, arrested after the fatal shooting of a white man, was held in a neighboring town today after officers repulsed a crowd of 200 that had advanced on the local jail with the victim's widow in the lead.

No charges have been filed against the girl, booked as Olivia Gardner. Deputy Sheriff E. O. Rollins said she confessed shooting S. E. Harlan, 32-year-old WPA truck driver, in self-defense after a fight.

Attorney Arrested In N. Y. Vice Trial

New York, May 27 (AP).—Announcing arrest of an attorney on charges he attempted to influence a witness, Special Prosecutor Thomas E. Dewey said today that four persons had told him of attempts to obtain perjured testimony in the trial of Charles Luciano and nine other men on vice charges.

Dewey said the four informants were being held as material witnesses. Sam Kornbluth was arrested last night on a charge of attempted subornation of perjury.

Anthony Curcio, who said he was a $10-a-week employe of James Frederico, one of the ten charged with holding the reins of the city's vice operations, said he had disclosed his knowledge of the syndicate to Dewey because he was piqued by Frederico's failure to supply him a defense attorney when the special prosecutor was investigating his activities.

Screen Tests.

Hollywood, May 27.

The studio, as I said, can be a great playhouse, a toy. I like to go to the film library—each studio has one—and take out a select celluloid book to show in a projection room. The other afternoon, for example, I saw a number of screen tests. They were the tests made by now established movie actresses and actors when they were trying to get into pictures. In fact, in many instances, these tests were the performers' application for a job.

HEPBURN.

It is interesting to watch a big-time actress trying to land in pictures, and to see how that performer has changed in appearance and technique; and to speculate if you would have hired that performer before he or she were acclaimed by the public.

There is the screen test that Katharine Hepburn made. Hepburn played a scene with Colin Kolin Keith-Johnson from her stage success, "The Warrior's Husband."

Hepburn had long hair. Her cheek bones stood out, and seemed to be her entire face. Her costume allowed her legs to be exposed. She didn't have on the proper screen makeup, and she spoke her lines too loudly. Hepburn was not the "glamour girl."

During the test, she stumbled on a line. Looking at Hepburn's initial appearance before the camera, it is evident that her walk has improved. Then she walked like Hope Williams.

When Keith-Johnson and Hepburn finished the scene, Keith-Johnson shrugged his shoulders, expressing his disapproval. I wouldn't pick Hepburn to be a movie star from this test—and neither would you.

* * * *

Fred MacMurray's screen test also surprised me. I've never seen him appear to better advantage on the screen. Remember, at the time he took the test, MacMurray was a member of an orchestra and not an actor. MacMurray wore a tuxedo, a top hat, carried a cane and sang, "Let's Fall in Love," which will give you an idea of when he made the test; he had a lovely, pleasa..t voice. He got the job. They have yet to give him a singing role in a picture. MacMurray also played a scene from "The Great Magoo." He was very effective. He has changed the style of combing his hair. The girl he played the scene with was excellent, but she didn't receive screen credit. It was startling to hear the number of risque lines coming from the screen. A favorite trick of actors making a test is to select a scene that no censor would permit on the screen. It makes the prospective buyer sit up and take notice.

Grace Bradley made a screen test with an actor named John Gallaudet. A credit slide, before the action starts, announces the names, weights and height of the contestants. This credit slide stated that the scene was "an original sketch," which is daring for a test. Later, I learned that the sketch was written for Grace Bradley by William Frawley.

Grace's makeup was bad. She spoke mainly to the camera and not to Gallaudet. He did plenty of mugging and played it as if he were doing a vaudeville act by himself. At the end, they both knew they had failed. Grace Bradley said: "Well, you can't blame me for trying." The line got her a contract.

Economy League Donations Listed

The Senate Lobby Committee yesterday made public a list of $119,757 in contributions received by the National Economy League from January 1 to April 1.

It said the list had been supplied by Henry H. Curran, league president.

Among prominent contributors: George F. Baker, $1,250; Marshall Field 3d, $200; Edward S. Harkness, $1,500; Bernard Baruch, $100; David K. E. Bruce, $200; Arthur Hays Sulzberger, $100; Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt, $300; Cornelius V. Whitney, $100; P. H. B. Frelinghuysen, $500; Helen Clay Frick, $500; John D. Rockefeller, jr., $1,000; Harry P. Davison, $300; John M. Schiff, $1,000; John S. Lehmann, $200; H. S. Morgan, $200; H. S. Vanderbilt, $100; Ralph Pulitzer, $100; E. I. Du Pont De Nemours & Co., $2,500; Cleveland E. Dodge, $100; Robert Saltonstall, $250; Mrs. T. J. Coolidge, $100.

2 Minor D. C. Bills Passed by Senate

The Senate yesterday passed two minor bills affecting the District upon recommendation of Senator Glass, who spoke for the Committee on Banking and Currency.

One of the measures permits the collection of fees from credit unions equal to the actual cost of an examination by the Treasury Department, while the second bill extends the charters of Washington trust companies, now due to expire at the end of two years.

The committee explained that the limitation on examination fees against credit union to $5.03 per $1,000 in assets is not sufficient to cover the cost of the examination.

Egyptian Tomb Found, Dates Back to 3200 B.C.

Cairo, Egypt, May 27 (AP).—A new tomb with two burial chambers believed to have been constructed during the fifth Egyptian dynasty has been discovered by Selim Hassan Bey, professor of Egyptology at the University of Cairo.

Announcing his discovery tonight, the professor said one of the burial chambers contains the body of Ka Niht, director of granaries, chief scribe and chief priest to the Pharaoh Sahure. The other chamber holds the body of Niht's wife.

Vampire Story Holds a Weird Appeal at Met.

'Dracula's Daughter' Is True to Type and Well Staged and Played.

By Nelson B. Bell.

"DRACULA'S DAUGHTER." Universal dramatization of a screen play by Garrett Fort, suggested by a story by Bram Stoker, featuring Otto Kruger, Gloria Holden, Marguerite Churchill, Irene Pichel, Edward Van Sloan, Hedda Hopper, Gilbert Emery, Claude Allister, E. E. Clive, Halliwell Hobbes, Billy Bevan, Nan Gray, Lily Melvon and Fred Walton. Directed by Lambert Hillyer. Reviewed Wednesday afternoon.

In its sequel to "Dracula," the blood-curdling production that precipitated an avalanche of "horror" pictures four or five years ago, Universal has successfully revived the chilling formula for gripping gooseflesh drama. "Dracula's Daughter" is quite as sinister and shocking in its implications as its daddy.

Deftly linking the first and the latest of the vampire yarns, so widely separated in the swift-moving chronology of the cinema, "Dracula's Daughter" is initiated by a brief reversion to Dracula's terrifying death at the hands of Dr. Von Helsing, who has just driven a stake through the monster's heart—the only sure way of terminating the weird and ghastly midnight enterprises of the murderous "undead."

Arrested for the murder of a man who actually had "died" five centuries before, Dr. Von Helsing is hustled before the better minds of Scotland Yard and there unfolds his unbelievable tale of the vampire line that lives on after death by consuming the blood of the living through minute incisions just over the jugular vein in the neck.

Reaches Vivid Climax.

While the young psychiatrist called in to aid the doctor's case is engaged in his professional duties, he encounters the vaguely ominous young woman who has inherited the curse of the man Von Helsing has robbed of his fatal powers. She exerts this supernatural power of hypnosis and blood-lust upon casual victims selected at random by her henchman, Sandor, and finally brings it to play upon those close to the credulous young psychiatrist, Jeffrey Garth. Mr. Garth thereupon hies him to the ancestral castle of the vampire family and there barters his own life for that of the girl he loves. And just then——

Well, just then there occurs a sufficiently sensational climax to satisfy the wildest dreams of the most ardent of the thrill-seekers.

Throughout the action of this gruesome drama there is the contrasted by-play of normal society at its pursuits and the grim terror of the lives of those who miraculously survice the grave by means that are both fascinating and revolting.

The eerie old castle in Transylvania is a masterpiece of antique dilapidation, crumbling over vast, cavernous chambers with slowly opening doors, mysterious hanging curtains and cobweb barricades concealing hidden dangers that emerge with cadaverous realism from strong and sullen coffins. Br-r-r-r!

Makeup Aids Illusion.

In makeup and costuming, the daughter of midnight's masterfiend and her lethal entourage also are something to strike terror to the heart of the susceptible. Gloria Holden, peculiarly equipped for this sort of nerve-tingling business, makes her screen debut in the title role and acquits herself with complete credit in a discreet performance that relies upon suggestion for the major portion of its terrifying effect. Irving Pichel is a Mephistophelean figure of homicidal enthusiasm whose final act of perfidy writes a period to the play.

On the other side of the balance are Otto Kruger, Marguerite Churchill, Gilbert Emery and a considerable coterie of others who lend their bafflement to the consummation of a plot that never is permitted to become too fantastic for easy consumption, even by the nonbelievers. Edward Van Sloan, without whose beatific contributions no Dracula picture would be complete, continues in the role of Von Helsing, and, of course, does it full and gentle justice, expounding most of the dialogue's pseudo-scientific argument in defense of the existence of vampires and the horrifying actuality of their depradations upon the human race.

Auxiliaries a Little Gayer.

A slightly gayer note is struck by the supplementary features of the new bill at the Metropolitan. Vincent Lopez and his orchestra contribute an interval of delightful music, both vocal and instrumental, and a silly two-reel comedy depicts the misadventures of a honeymoon couple at Niagara Falls. Tim Ryan and Irene Noblette are the couple.

The Paramount half of the combined Paramount-Universal newsreel discloses the completeness of the destruction of Addis Ababa, capital of Ethiopia, at the hands of the marauders who preceded the Italian forces into the city. The capital, described by both E. M. Newman and Burton Holmes in their travel talks last winter, was reduced to a shambles, with buildings wrecked and burned and the dead littering the streets. This is the one supplementary touch of the program that surpasses the feature in its frank exposition of violent death.

If that is the kind of bill you like, there it is!

'The Scarecrow'

"THE SCARECROW." The Pierce Hall Players present the poetic drama in four acts by Percy MacKaye, directed by Ina L. Hawes, with stage settings by K. Hilding Beij. At Pierce Hall, May 27 and 28. Reviewed Wednesday evening by Richard Q. Jones.

Blacksmith Bess (Goody Rickby) ..... Joanne Adams
Dickon ..... Jack Aracey
Rachel Merton ..... Felice Lloyd
Richard Talbot ..... Robert P. Marshall
Justice Gilead Merton, Wm. Austin Davis
Lord Ravensbane (the Scarecrow) ..... Frank Koonce

Essaying a drama of formidable proportions, the Pierce Hall Players bring to a brilliant close their 1935-36 season, offering Percy MacKaye's "The Scarecrow" in a production which tops this year's efforts and probably sets a new high in local drama circles for heavy drama comprehensively and understandingly produced.

"The Scarecrow" is not a play to be lightly considered, and the players took the MacKaye commentary on the foibles of humanity and played it, with all its invoking of black magic, in an honest and realistic manner. The drama is inherently slow, telling the story of how Goody Rickby (Blacksmith Bess), abetted by Dickson, his Satanic Lowness incarnate, metamorphosed a scarecrow into Lord Ravensbane that her own vengeance might be served on Justice Gilead Merton, who, some years earlier, had not been the paragon he seems in the later years.

Through the basic narrative runs the love theme of Lord Ravensbane and Rachael, the Justice's niece, earlier betrothed to Richard Talbot. The drama closes with Lord Ravensbane, through Rachael's love, made a real man, only to die, the victim of this so-called "Tragedy of the Ludicrous."

Full of trenchant lines, of situations of pith and moment, the drama presented a task heretofore discreetly ignored by the group, but through the understanding direction of Ina L. Hawes the Players came through with a sterling production.

Cast Is Well Balanced.

Whether to accord Frank S. Koonce as the appealing Lord Ravensbane or Jack Aracey, as the sleethy Mephistopheles; or Felice E. Loyd, as the understanding niece; or William Austin Davis, as the hypocritical justice; or Joanne Adams, as the revengeful Goody Rickby, the principal histrionic honors would indeed be a difficult decision, for each in his part gave a reading which drew its quantum of effective delineation.

Even the supernumeraries—including Virginia Christie, David Wolf, Robert Duke, Carl C. Pribek, Sally F. Stewart, Clarence W. Moore, Clayton Braathen, Arthur Morley, Margaret Osterwald, Hildegarde Gray—were excellently cast and had their moments of fine interpretation.

To K. Hilding Beij should go particular praise, for his splendid settings, especially of the blacksmith shop, wherein there is offered one of the finest exhibitions of dramaturgic magic ever seen upon the local semiprofessional stage.

After seeing "The Scarecrow" one can well appreciate why many a group eschews the production of Mr. MacKaye's works. But it is great "theater," this play, a tense document, replete with strongly drawn characters and profound lines of rich wisdom.

About The Showshops

JACK HYLTON, famous in every capital of Europe as Great Britain's "pioneer of modern dance music," will bring his broadcasting orchestra to Washington for a week of stage appearances at the Earle Theater a week from today, Friday, June 5, according to announcement made yesterday afternoon from the executive offices of the Warner Brothers in the Earle Theater Building.

BELL.

An oil company brought Hylton and his band to America last October for a series of broadcasts over the C. B. S. facilities. They now are taking the air every Sunday night over the N. B. C. networks. On the other side, Hylton and his instrumentalists have appeared at several command performances, including special programs for three different presidents of France.

At the Earle, the organization will present its "Continental Revue," featuring Pat O'Malley, Peggy Dell, Magda Neeld and various other entertainers and specialists. Just before leaving England, Jack Hylton appeared in the motion picture, "She Shall Have Music," in which he played a part, in addition to conducting his band. The title song of this film now is one of the popular hits in America, so I am told, ranking among the first five last week.

Of course, could it have been arranged, the perfect booking would have been to have the Hylton orchestra on the Earle stage for the week beginning today, when Jessie Matthews occupies the stellar spot on the screen. It could have been called "Dear Old Albion Week," or something.

Although mention of it is made in an adjoining column, I cannot refrain from emphasizing the vividness of the Paramount Newsreel's revelation of the extent of the havoc wrought in Addis Ababa by the pillaging natives prior to the arrival of the conquering Italian forces. It recalled, in miniature, the scenes of destruction on the Western front during the Great War, with the additional horror of slaughtered victims of the savagery strewn about the streets uncared for and unburied after several days. The films were made by John Dored, who stuck to his camera after everybody else had called it a day. Hope he got something more than a bronze medal and a letter of thanks for his tenacity and courage. And I wonder if by any chance he ever saw "A Message to Garcia?"

Today and tomorrow are the days Sidney Lust is making his "great experiment" in nearby Maryland communities. At the Cameo Theater, in Mount Rainier, and the Milo, in Rockville, Mr. Lust is presenting the Warner Brothers' picturization of Shakespeare's "A Midsummer Night's Dream," as a road show attraction at a $1.10 scale of prices, with all seats reserved. Of course, there is no reason why this should not be done. The only possible argument against it is that it never has been done before. On Thursday and Friday of next week, the Reinhardt film will be shown on the same basis in the Arcade Theater, in Hyattsville. Two performances a day only are given, at 2:15 and 8:15 p. m. If these bookings prove successful—and there is every indication, in the form of advance reservations, that they will—other pictures of like magnitude and merit also will be road-showed in the Lust suburban houses.

This is the lazy season of the year when the drayma desks are briefly shaken out of the humdrum of their two-on-the-aisle existences by being hoisted into the air and shoved out into the open. I mean to say that, what with invitations to the Cocoanut Grove and the opening of the Powhatan Roof, with Pete Macias furnishing the music and Managing Director Arthur J. Harnett the impeccable hosting, and Barney Breeskin's wire about the Shoreham Terrace, the starving Armenians of the theater are smacking their lips and having themselves a time! With deep gratitude and genuflections to their thoughtful benefactors, as goes without saying.

Probably as a result of another case of mistaken identity, the Congress of American Poets take pleasure in extending to this column their cordial invitation to act as an honorary member of the National Poetry Council and to designate certain delegates to participate in the proceedings of the Congress on dates most convenient between June 14 and October 12, 1936. I am deeply honored by this undeserved attention and value it particularly by reason of the fact that the invitation is signed by the beloved and venerable Edwin Markham.

From bacteriological research to acting was the odd turn taken by Rex Ingram, who appears in the role of "De Lawd" in the film version of Marc Connelly's "The Green Pastures," Pulitzer Prize play just picturized by the Warner Brothers. Ingram, who is only 40—a surprisingly young man for the role he plays in the picture—is a graduate of Northwestern University, at Evanston, Ill., where he was an athletic star and received the degree of doctor of medicine. He is a visitor in Washington today and will receive the press in the clubrooms of the Warner organization in the Earle Theater Building this afternoon.

Singing Star on Stage Tomorrow

A new portrait study in closeup by Ferenc, famous camera artist of Vienna, who specializes in stars of the film colony in Hollywood. His present subject—and an exceedingly handsome one it is, too—is Winifred Shaw, one of filmdom's most gifted sopranos. After a year's absence, Wini returns to the National Capital to headline the stage portion of the bill at the Warner Brothers Earle Theater, beginning tomorrow. She was last seen locally on the screen in blackface with Al Jolson in "The Singing Kid."

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

International Art Forum presents at the Washington Club Wednesday night Clelia Fioravanti, mezzo-soprano; Priska Kaspar, pianist; Howard Moore, barytone; Willa Semple and Evelyn Wells, accompanists. Program of songs by Marcello, Paisiello, Sibella, Cimara, Spontini, Debussy, Respighi, Schubert, Brahms, Schumann, Chaikovski, Grechaninov and Richard Strauss; piano pieces, Chopin, Liszt and Paul Juon.

As befits a singer with a sense of style, Miss Fioravanti managed to compress a wide range of musical fashions into a small space. At one end of her list was Marcello's "Quella fiamma che m'accende," a pure sample of the Italian manner of the early eighteenth century, and at the other the contemporary lyricism of Ottorino Respighi, whose pen was halted by death a little more than a month ago.

In her singing was manifest a graceful command of phrasing, an excellent asset, which she used to advantage. She has accuracy of intonation, clarity of diction, and surety of breath control. The timbre of the tone, however, was more than occasionally disturbed by vibrato; when heard in its rondure, it was agreeably pure in color.

Mr. Howard's barytone voice is on the lyric side with a light resonance which leaves his lower register rather pale. He sings with a pleasant ease, though his tone needs smoothing. Because the tone came out free from burr in several moments of climax, one feels that he should put more fervor into his readings. The "Sapphische Ode" of Brahms was sung much too slowly, and there were other evidences of over-caution in temperament.

How a Baby Grows

By Dr. Arnold Gesell, M. D.

Creeping Part Five

THE BABY LEARNS TO CREEP. He goes on fours before twos. Uses hands and knees before he travels by foot. At the end of the first year he becomes a biped. In the first four parts of this chapter on creeping, it has been shown that at 20 weeks the baby is unable to make any progress at all. At 32 weeks he is able to pivot in a circle by using his arms. At 36 weeks, with legs still inactive, he moves backward by pushing with his arms. Later he progresses forward in a half creep, half crawl movement. Today we show him in the fifth stage as he learns to creep. He is 40 weeks old and has learned to alternate hands and knees, moving ahead and out of the circle completely in true creeping style. TOMORROW: Standing, Part One.

Things That Make Women More Beautiful

Rose Geranium Bath Salts Exquisite for Summer.

By Mignon.

(The Mignon who writes this column does not sell, indorse or manufacture any cosmetics.)

THE WOMEN seem to be going back to the lavender and old lace era in choosing their perfumes and perfumed cosmetics. Can you remember when it was quite the thing to pick a rose geranium leaf, twist it and then hold it between the hands for a moment and then to bury your face in your palms and inhale the fragrance? Rose geranium has for the last few years rightfully come into its own again.

So many of the perfumes today are synthetic fragrances, but if they are good ones no one objects. Some of them are nothing short of terrible, but I have yet to find a rose geranium scent that you can mistake for anything else—but, of course, I haven't been every place. I have tried to poke my nose into every corner where I heard there was a geranium or rose geranium soap, perfume, toilet water, bath powder or bath salts.

I am proud to have discovered one of the best rose geranium bath salts that I ever found and it is not exorbitant in price. Another thing, you don't have to use a pint of it to get a fragrance. Just a little shake of the bottle and perhaps a tablespoonful of the salts perfumes your bath, dressing room and bedroom. If you haven't all of these it perfumes at least three of whatever rooms you may happen to have. If you have only two rooms, use less.

Wise Mothers Shun Quarrels Of Offspring

Discourage Their Children From Bringing Complaints Home.

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

"MRS. JONES, I am going to ask you to punish your son Tommy. He beat up my Edward today and sent him home crying."

Scarcely a day passed without such a complaint from Mrs. Smith. Even speaking rudely to Edward was to her an insult, and the neighborhood dreaded her calls. As to the children, of all of whom she had at some time complained, they gave her lip service when she was in sight or hearing, and in their hearts laughed at and despised her.

Worst of all, however, was the effect on Edward. No one wanted to play with him, for as sure as any trouble arose, Edward's mother would be sure to interfere to rescue her child and probably scold or make complaints against his companions.

The wise mother keeps out of her children's quarrels as far as she can and discourages her child from bringing her any complaints or comments about his play-fellows. Rarely is interference justified, but so seldom as to be negligible. The boy who "tells" is always unpopular, and in time comes to deserve his unpopularity by his cowardly attitude.

As a general thing children are not deliberately brutal to each other. If there is a fight or if some boy is hurt in a free-for-all, it is not the result of meanness or cruelty, but part of the normal give and take of life. It is a good thing for a boy to learn early to accept it and either laugh or defend himself. Fathers understand such matters better than mothers. If the mother feels unable, therefore, to handle the situation, she might turn it over to the boy's father and let him teach the boy how to grapple with his own problems and make his own equation with other boys.

Table Place Mats.

The newest thing in dining room table place mats is a set made of drinking straws of cellulose film, giving the effect of rows of little glass tubes. They are made in crystal clear tone, with a border at either end in color—sapphire blue, red, green or gold.

Today's Health Talk

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Warts on the Soles.

Warts may occur on any part of the body, but when they are found on the soles of the feet they are a source of great discomfort that amounts to incapacity. They appear more often in young people and are probably of infectious origin, since they are common among children and those who walk barefooted in dressing rooms, locker rooms and shower baths.

These growths are usually found in groups or flocks, and from 10 to 12 or more may be seen on the sole of each foot. They differ from warts in other situations in that they do not protrude above the surface. By reason of continued pressure they are pushed into the skin, so that the masses of new tissue lie in pockets produced by crowding aside the normal cells. The customary sites are the balls of the toes, the metatarsal pads (just back of the toes) and the heels.

In appearance they are round or oval in shape, gray or tan in color, and are readily distinguished from the surrounding skin. They can be felt as tiny tumors that are painful to the touch. In some cases it requires considerable experience to differentiate them from corns or calluses. Not infrequently a callus, brought on by the pressure of walking, may overlie one or more of these warts.

Because of their pain producing character many plans of treatment have been devised, varying from surgery to the application of radium or X-ray. Small warts may be removed effectively by a paste which contains salicylic acid or some other tissue destroying agent. With deeper and more extensive areas the X-ray has been used after dislodging the outer layers of skin, thus exposing the enlargements directly to this powerful force. Surgical diathermy has also been suggested, as has carbon dioxide snow, and scraping out the entire region with a sharp instrument.

On the theory that the growths follow an infection with some unknown virus, the injection of bismuth salicylate into the muscles was tried. The treatments were given a week apart and the dose adjusted to the age of the patient. In most cases atrophy (shrinking) was observed after the first injection and, in a few instances, but one was required. Additional doses were not given as long as reduction in size was progressing. In many patients the warts appeared to melt away; in others they seemed to rise out of the deeper tissues much like a kernel is extruded from a pocket, leaving a smooth surface without a scar. From one to three injections relieved the greatest number of sufferers.

Plans of treatment—almost as numerous as the names in the telephone directory—include magic and charms. An afflicted patient will relate that moving from one city to another brought about complete cure. Another will tell of his success in the use of a trick diet, while others have found a panacea in Dr. Twiddlefinger's patent ointment.

While in some circumstances these affairs may disappear well nigh miraculously, the certain results with the bismuth injection treatment or the hot whirlpool bath can not be gainsaid.

Women Happier In Their 40's, Writer Thinks

By Hope Ridings Miller.

WHEN JOSEPH HERGESHEIMER said, "The difference between a young girl and an older woman is the difference between a penny whistle and a piano," some persons thought he was going epigrammatic at the expense of truth.

Yet many authorities have been of the same opinion. Balzac said a woman reaches her prime at 30, and proceeded to prove it by pointing out that the most romantic heroines of history and literature have been mature.

Those who agree with Balzac believe Shakespeare made his biggest mistake when he made Juliet but 14. They have pointed out that Elizabeth had her Leicester love affair when she was 30; that Mme. de Pompadour and Mme. de Maintenon reached the height of their heartbreaking in their thirties; and that Napoleon married Josephine when she was 33. These facts prove, they say, that woman reaches her zenith in her third decade.

Woman Novelist Disagrees.

But now comes another novelist with a new slant on this often-disputed subject. Ethel Hueston (Mrs. Randolph Blinn) has closely observed plenty of heroines in life and has put a fair number of them into her 23 books (which include a score of romances, two historical novels and a travel volume). And while she has played no favorites with ages of her fictional ladies, she is convinced "a woman in her thirties is not at the height of her charm, because she is generally unhappier then than at any other time in her life.

"She is looking back wistfully on her youth—which she realizes is slipping by at an increased rate of speed every year. She looks forward to what she thinks is bleak old age and wonders how she will survive the wrinkles and silver hair already beginning to make their appearance. She wants to keep her youth; she dreads the ravages of age. She is looking both ways at once and is dreadfully unhappy about the whole outlook. I don't envy her one bit."

All this the novelist said yesterday over a cup of coffee in her apartment at the Argonne. "I wouldn't be in my thirties again for anything," she went on, her eyes twinkling. "Once I passed my fortieth birthday, everything seemed to clear up. For a decade I, like most women, had been looking back to the days of my youth. At 40, I faced the fact they had passed and proceeded to look forward again. I've been happier ever since. I believe a woman's best years come after 40, or even after 45."

Yet Mrs. Blinn made it clear she was not in any sense discrediting youth. "The fact I wouldn't be 30 or 20 today—even if I could—doesn't mean I don't admire modern boys and girls," she said. "I do. I think they are wonderful. I look at young women today and think how fine they are, how much they have it over the young women of my generation. The modern girl frankly admits she wants to be popular, wants to get married, wants to have children. In my day such desires were never expressed. They weren't considered lady-like."

She further believes romantic ideas in modern girls' make-up is nicely seasoned with reality, that "girls today grasp the romance without once overlooking the more practical side of life."

She pointed out that "Miss 1936 bridges the gap between naturalness and glamour by emphasizing her own personality rather than her ability to copy the glitter-guise of any other person. She tries, in other words, to be her most attractive self and not Greta Garbo."

On marital problems, Mrs. Blinn has also drawn some unusual conclusions. She challenges the current belief that the first year of marriage is the most difficult. "If I don't think so, at all," she said. "If the marriage is based on love (not infatuation), most of those first-year quarrels amount to nothing at all, and can be solved with a kiss. Later on, say about the third year of marriage when some of the romantic bloom has been dispelled, the situation is more difficult. By then, the wife has begun to wonder if humdrum housekeeping is to be her lot forever. That is the danger time. That is when she needs every ounce of her common sense, for family ties need both tact and finesse in adjustment at this crisis in marirage. But, of course, even then, sympathy and selflessness of both husband and wife can solve almost any problem."

Wife Happiest When Busiest.

The happiest wife is the busiest wife, in Mrs. Blinn's opinion, "provided she is busy about something besides keeping her house and 'housekeeping her husband.' The most miserable women I know are those who have no absorbing outside-the-home interests. I think it's better for a wife to work in an office every day from 9 to 5 and run her home on the can-opener basis than to have no extra-household interests at all.

"But I think it's still better—if she doesn't need to enter the business world—for her to paint or write or study music or read at home. Or, she can devote her extra time to organization work—political, welfare or literary. Any absorbing interest that profitably occupies her spare moments will give her the proper perspective, will set her mind free of trifles and will make her husband happier, as well as herself."

Says Best Years Are After Forty

Harris & Ewing.

MRS. RANDOLPH BLINN, professionally known as Ethel Hueston, the novelist, challenges the widespread belief that the woman in her thirties is happiest. "The best years come after 40, or even 45," she says.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Correspondent Is Looking for Five Persons to Make Up Study Club; She Would Furnish Books.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Are you familiar with Edmund Shaftesbury's classics? One hears a great deal about achievement through thought, but the combination of personal magnetism and thought is tremendous. One particular book, "Instantaneous Personal Magnetism," by Edmund Shaftesbury, is so beneficial I wish I could place it in the hands of every person starting out in life. It would help especially to keep married life off the shoals of divorce, and be equally helpful to those who travel life's journey alone.

• • • •

Students of vocal music would find undreamed-of treasures in this particular book, so say famous teachers of singing. It seems a daily loss to miss the benefits of its priceless teaching. I can hardly express the assistance it has been to me. The simplicity of its language is wonderful and the appeal of its teachings irresistible.

• • • •

I would take pleasure in supplying Shaftesbury's interesting book, "How to Make Personality Pay," to a club of five persons, if such a club could be formed of persons who would appreciate or feel the need of what this book can give. Such a club would be as interesting to me as it might prove helpful to its members. I hope to find just the right persons through your column, therefore I am presenting my request through you. Miss Haworth, you have been so successful in solving many very difficult—almost hopeless—problems, that I trust mine will seem easy in comparison.

• • • •

Hon. William Ewart Gladstone and Bishop John Phillip Brooks possessed Shaftesbury's works. With best wishes for your continued success, very sincerely. PAMELA.

DEAR PAMELA: I am not familiar with Edmund Shaftesbury's classics. As a matter of fact, yours is the first mention I have ever heard made of them. However, if they are all you claim for them and you are willing to furnish books for a small reading club of the sort suggested, you should have no difficulty securing recruits to such a group. I shall be glad to give your name and address to any inquirers. M. H.

• • • •

Attention: Hiking Minded.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: The characteristically friendly note from nice little Rose Marie Petta (of Syracuse), published in your Washington Post column Monday morning, May 23, prompts me to tender services that I have often felt like offering you for possible use in partly solving some of the problems of the lonely that are constantly brought to your attention . . .

• • • •

During the last 26 months I have participated in 84 Sunday hikes sponsored by the Wanderbirds' Hiking Club mentioned by Miss Petta. The smallest group during that time included 13 persons and the largest, 208 persons. We went in all kinds of weather. The aggregate has been around 1,700 men, women and youngsters, representing natives of almost all the States as well as persons from Canada, Mexico, Guatemala, Panama, Ecuador, Chile, Argentina, England, Scotland, Ireland, Norway, Sweden, Denmark, Holland, Germany, Lithuania, Czechoslovakia, Poland, Russia, Switzerland, Hungary, Rumania, British India, Straits Settlements, Australia, Hawaii, Alaska, and perhaps a few other countries.

• • • •

I like people and I like to help deserving individuals but I have no use for persons who are habitually inconsiderate, selfish, loud and boisterous, common, vulgar, stupid and with no desire to learn or to improve themselves . . . Long experience at hiking has convinced me the smoker and the boozer are never good hikers. Some smokers are comfortable slow strollers. More of them are contented, silent and solitary fishermen, avoiding sociability.

• • • •

It has seemed to me that something worthwhile might naturally be developed for the more desirable class of participants in group hikes; that a group might be organized among residents of Washington who are temporarily detached from their familiar regional friends and relatives . . . Without impaling me on the spear of undue publicity, you might orally shunt some hiking-minded individuals in my direction by suggesting that they get in touch with me if they are interested in such recreation. Sincerely yours, A. R.

• • • •

DEAR A. R.: If I am to be the medium of shunting hiking-minded individuals in your direction (to borrow your phrase) it seems to me the only way to accomplish that end is to publish your letter (even at the risk of impaling you on the spear of publicity) and leave the next move up to interested readers. Your name and address will be given to any who ask for it. M. H.

Cheaper, Quick-Drying Paint Now on Market

Right in time for the spring renovation comes a new flat wall paint which is designed to fill the gap between nonwashable cold-water paints and more expensive flat wall paints.

When this product is used the room can be restored to order the same day, as it dries in two hours, giving a dull, washable coating. One coat is usually enough for refinishing walls that have been previously painted.

For Love or Money

By ROB EDEN

BRENDA FAYRE, 22, has become involved in a world of lies because of her loyalty to her invalid sister, LALLY, who cannot walk. Brenda, broke and at her wits' end, has accepted a job of which she is ashamed—"siren" for WALTER JASON, salesman of worthless gold mine stock. Her job is to entertain Jason's prospective victims.

Brenda has been able more easily to deceive Lally about her work because Lally has fallen in love with VAL SARGENT, brilliant young writer who lives in the apartment above theirs. Brenda has guessed her sister's secret love and knows it is because of Val that Lally is determined on an operation which may enable her to walk. And Brenda knows, too, that Val does not love her sister, but herself. To her, her own feelings in the matter are of no moment. She is solely concerned in protecting Lally. To avoid Val she goes out with Jason, who is infatuated with her, though both know that Jason's "partner" and the brains of his business, ETHEL RUSH, disapproves. Ethel, 8 years older than Jason, loves him and is jealous of him.

So, when Jason urges Brenda to accept from him a diamond ring, she does so and wears it home on her third finger.

Chapter 19.

"BRENDA, you aren't!"

"Lally, I am."

Lally took hold of her sister's hand, and studied the ring. When she looked up there were tears in her eyes.

"Darling, you mustn't! I wouldn't have told you, if I had thought—"

"No, no dear. I'm so happy. Please believe that I am—but it's such a surprise, and then——"

"We're not going to be married for a long time, Lally. Until long after your operation, until you get well and strong. You don't have to worry about that."

"It wasn't that so much—as losing you. Brenda, do you love him?"

I wouldn't marry anyone I didn't love, dear. You know me better than that."

"But you haven't said much about him. You never told me—"

"I was afraid that he didn't love me, and then last night, he told me he did, and he gave me this ring."

Lally dropped back on the pillows, and smiled wanly. She was still holding Brenda's hand, touching the ring.

"And now I'll bring breakfast in," Brenda said. She wanted more than anything to get out of the room, and away from the blue eyes of Lally, away from the touch of Lally's fingers. In the kitchen she took twice as long as was necessary fixing the tray, because her courage was low, and Lally would have questions for her to answer when she returned.

They came when she brought the tray in, and propped more pillows at Lally's back. The shock and surprise were gone from Lally's eyes and face, and in their place was eager curiosity.

What had Mr. Jason said when he proposed? What had Brenda said? Where had they been? When were they really planning to be married? Was Brenda sure she loved him? Truly sure? Was she surprised when he gave her the ring? Why didn't she wake her up last night, the minute she came home to tell her? Why had she waited until morning? What were they going to do after they were married?

Gone.

Lally didn't wait to have her questions answered. She pelted them at Brenda as fast as she could, and then asked more and more. Later, after breakfast, when Brenda was dressing her and putting her in her chair, she had calmed down a little.

"He'll come to dinner tonight, Brenda. What would he like to eat? Val can shop for me. He'll be glad to, so you won't have to come back from the market before you go to town."

Brenda took a deep breath. "He left this morning for the mine, dear, and he won't be back for a couple of weeks," she lied as smoothly as she could. "I've been trying to tell you, but you wouldn't listen."

"Yes, that's why he gave me my ring last night, so I would know, and have it."

"Then I won't see him?"

"Not until he comes back."

"I hardly remember him, Brenda. When you first went to work for him, I tried to remember what he looked like, but I couldn't. I only saw him once, you know, and then only for a few minutes. That day Roger brought him into my room when I was ill. The first time you saw him, Brenda! I'll probably be in the hospital when he comes back!"

"I hope so, dear."

"Isn't it funny the way things happen? Here, I'm going to walk, and you're going to be married——"

Brenda put on her hat slowly. Her face was turned away so Lally could not see the pain that passed over it.

"And if I do really walk, you'll have to wait to be married until I can be a bridesmaid for you, dear. You'll wait, won't you?"

"I'll wait——"

"Val will be so pleased, Brenda. You don't mind if I tell him! I really couldn't keep it—unless you'd rather——"

"No, you tell him today. He's coming in, isn't he?"

"He's going to take me for a walk."

Brenda hurried around, blindly hunting her gloves, her purse, a fresh handkerchief. Lally would tell Val. Lally would tell Val. That was what she wanted all the time. That was the plan that had come to her last night with Walter, when she was ready to take his ring off her finger and put it back in its box. That was why she hadn't put it into its box, but instead had slipped it back on her hand. That was what had taken away the static uncertainty. Lally would tell Val, and Val would know there was no use loving her any longer.

"Your gloves are on your purse, darling," Lally called, "and your purse is on the table."

Brenda got out finally, and the clean, fresh air felt good. She didn't think she could have stood another minute in the flat with Lally, and the questions in Lally's eyes.

Walter wouldn't come to the flat. He never had, had never even asked to come. She was safe as far as that problem was concerned. Dr. Koenig would be here next week, and after that—well, she couldn't think that far ahead now. It was no use worrying anyway. If worst came to worst, she could always take Walter into her confidence, even if she didn't want to.

Roses.

She and Walter had a luncheon engagement with a prospect, so the day went very fast. After the luncheon, Walter went away with the prospect, and she went back to Ethel's. The ring she had shifted from the third finger on her left hand to the third finger of her right, for the luncheon. On the street car going home, she changed it again, back to the finger where Lally expected to see it.

On the table when she came into the flat was a great bunch of American Beauty roses.

"I suppose they're from your Walter," Lally said excitedly as she handed her a card sealed in an envelope. Brenda opened the envelope and nodded.

"And I told Val. He wasn't nearly so surprised as I thought he would be. He seemed to—well, I can't just explain, but he seemed to expect it. He just sat and didn't say anything, and then I asked him if he had guessed and he said no. But I think he had guessed, dear."

"And you went for your walk?"

"Yes, I teased him and told him that I had something to tell him, but I wouldn't tell him until we got to the park. Then I told him."

Brenda glanced at the table. It was set only with two places, hers and Lally's. Val, when he was present, sat facing the balcony door.

Lally saw Brenda looking at the table. "I asked him to stay to dinner, but he wouldn't. Said he was going to work all night. Going over the novel, but he won't be noisy, because he's only making corrections. I don't think he feels very well, Brenda. I think he's been working too hard."

Elinor Ryan To Construct Home in City

She Divides Time Now Between Washington and New York.

Miss Elinor Ryan, who has lived here for several years, occupying the home of Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, and, more recently, that of Mr. and Mrs. David Lawrence, is planning to build a house of her own.

She will build her new home at 1700 Foxhall road adjacent to that of Mrs. Harriman, which she rented last season. The property extends from Forty-fourth street to Foxhall road and the house is to be 280 feet back from the highway on the extensive acreage.

The application for a building permit, which was filed by the builder, James Stewart & Co., of New York City, specified the house was to be a two-story dwelling, costing $150,000. W. L. Bottomley, of New York City, is the architect.

Miss Ryan, whose brother, Joseph J. Ryan, will be graduated from Princeton University in June, has divided her time between Washington and New York in recent months and has been hostess at a number of functions lately in the David Lawrence home on Nebraska avenue. She is noted for the artistic detail of the parties at which she entertains.

One of the affairs she has given was that honoring Miss Dolly Corbin, who is now en route to Honolulu. The buffet supper was served on the lawn, where small tables were set and Japanese lanterns provided the illumination.

Mr. and Mrs. S. W. Keown, of Toronto, Canada, are at the Fairfax.

Mrs. Phil D. Brown, general chairman for the annual reunion and banquet of the Holy Cross Academy Alumnae Association, to be held at te Mayflower Hotel Monday, was hostess Tuesday to a small group assisting with arrangements. Mrs. Ralph Carbois is chairman of reservations for the reunion. Mrs. Gerald Egan, president of the association, will preside, and Miss Gertrude McNally will be toastmaster.

Mr. and Mrs. G. P. Kenway, with Miss Mary Kenway, are making their home at the Wardman Park Hotel.

Mr. and Mrs. Wylie Allen entertained at dinner at the Shoreham last night for Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Moser. Mr. Moser is resigning as building and loan consultant for the Federal Housing Administration to return to New York.

Mr. and Mrs. H. Green, of Miami, Fla., have taken an apartment at the Fairfax.

Japan's Envoy And Wife Hosts

Entertain at Dinner Where Native Menu Is Served. to Small Group.

The Ambassador of Peru, Senor Don Manuel de Freyre y Santander, was the ranking guest at the dinner given last evening by the Ambassador of Japan and Mme. Saito in the embassy, at which a Japanese menu was served.

The other guests were the Minister of Finland and Mme. Jarnefelt, the Minister of Finland to Japan, Mr. Hugo Valvanne, who spent yesterday at the Legation of Finland en route to New York, whence he will sail for Europe for a vacation; also Col. Charles Burnett, the Naval Attache of the Italian Embassy and Marchioness di Sant'Orsola, Capt. and Mrs. John P. Jackson, Commander and Mrs. Ellis M. Zacharias, Mrs. John Allan Dougherty, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Moore and their daughter, Miss Margaret Moore; the Rev. and Mrs. John A. Welbourn, of Leesburg, Va.; Mr. Samuel B. Detwiler, jr., and the Counselor of the Japanese Embassy and Mme. Yoshizawa.

Arts Club to Meet.

Mrs. Samuel S. Koones and Mrs. Willoughby Chesley will be hostesses for dinner this evening at the Arts Club, preceding a talk on Japanese flower arrangement by Mrs. Herbert Gregor. Mrs. Gregor, who has been giving a course of lecture on the subject of flower arrangement, will illustrate her talk with bouquets in various types of vases.

OVERLOOKING CENTRAL PARK

To attribute the popularity of the Savoy-Plaza to any one feature would be difficult. It is the combination of luxurious living . . . supreme service . . . unsurpassed cuisine and the most beautiful outlook in New York, overlooking Central Park. Single rooms from $5. Double from $7. TAKE WEIGHT OFF TIRED FEET

Lose Fat The Easy Way—Without Starvation Diets, or Back-Breaking, Bending and Rolling Exercises.

If your feet and ankles feel tired and ache all over—because you are carrying too much fat—do something about it. Try the treatment that has helped millions to reduce excess weight.

There's a reason why so many people find dieting slow and often times futile in reducing. The reason, doctors say, is often because a little gland is not working right.

All the blood in your body goes through this tiny gland sixteen times every day. If it doesn't pour into the blood stream about one and one-half drops of vital fluid every 24 hours, many people take on ugly fat. This fluid helps Nature to "burn up" excess food and fatty tissue in much the same way as a good "draft" acts in a furnace.

Now, physicians combat this condition by feeding this gland the substance it lacks — and millions of pounds of excess fat has been wiped out in this way.

Marmola Prescription Tablets are based on the same method used by doctors. So don't waste your time or money striving to reduce with starvation diets or back-breaking exercises. Start the Marmola treatment today that millions have used successfully to get rid of excess fat. The formula is in every box so you know just what you are taking. Don't wait—get a box of Marmola today from your druggist. (Advt.)

Mrs. Fred Boschen And Her Daughter Will Leave Coast

Mrs. Fred W. Boschen and her daughter, Miss Betty Boschen, will leave San Francisco Sunday or Monday by motor for Washington to join Maj. Gen. Boschen, Chief of Finance, U. S. A.

Miss Boschen has just completed her course at the San Francisco School of Fine Arts, where she had been a student since she was graduated from the Sarah Dix Hamlin School.

Peggy Morgan To Be Attended By Miss Raoul

Former Capital Resident to Be Wed July 3 to Mr. Abel-Smith.

Miss Peggy Morgan, whose engagement to Mr. Alexander Abel-Smith, of London, has been announced by her father, Mr. David Bradley Morgan, of Biltmore, N. C., has selected Miss Kathleen Raoul, of Biltmore, as her only attendant at her wedding, which will take place July 3, in Biltmore. A wedding breakfast at her father's home will follow the ceremony. Mr. Morris Bridgeman, of London, will be Mr. Abel-Smith's best man.

Miss Morgan was educated at Les Fougeres School in Lausanne, Switzerland, was presented at the Court of Saint James' in 1932 and studied at Paris the following year. She recently had lived in Washington with hre mother, who died last winter.

Mr. Abel-Smith was educated at Eton and at Magdalen College, Oxford. For six and a half years he has been associated with J. P. Morgan & Co. in New York. After the wedding, Mr. Abel-Smith and his bride will live in London, where he has taken a position with the London branch of Spencer Trask & Co.

Miss Ingersoll To Give Recital

Student, 14, to Play Group of Classical Numbers at School Tonight.

Friends of Capt. and Mrs. R. E. Ingersoll, U. S. N., and of their daughter, Miss Alice Jean Ingersoll, a student at Holton-Arms School and the Washington College of Music, tonight will be guests at her piano recital at the college.

Miss Ingersoll, who is 14 years of age, is considered by her teachers a musician of unusual talent. She is being presented in her program tonight by Fanny Amstutz Roberts, with whom she has studied a year and a half of the five years she has devoted to the piano.

Her program tonight will include three Bach Inventions, the four movements of Beethoven's Sonata in C sharp minor, "Jugglerie" and also the Concerto in A, by Godard, a Grieg Nocturne and an Adagio by Haydn, as well as a group of modern numbers.

Miss Ingersoll remained at Holton-Arms while her parents were in London, where Capt. Ingersoll attended the recent naval conference.

Holiday Trips Are Planned By Officials

Bewleys to Spend Week-End in Yorktown at Nelson House.

Spanish Embassy Aids to Attend Tennis Meet in Germantown.

By Dudley Harmon.

Washington's annual exodus on Memorial Day shows signs this year of being even larger than usual, owing to the fact that the holiday falls on a Saturday, thus allowing a full week-end to those who want to leave the Capital. Many from diplomatic and official circles already are making plans to go by train or motor to the nearby countryside or to New York and Philadelphia.

The Financial Counselor of the British Embassy and Mrs. T. K. Bewley will spend the week-end in Yorktown, Va., as the guests of the Assistant Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Wayne Chatfield-Taylor. Mrs. Taylor's home there, Nelson House, is one of the most historic in a locality noted for its associations with important events in the American Revolution. It was there Gen. Cornwallis made his headquarters at the Battle of Yorktown.

Among those who will spend the holiday at the Homestead in Hot Springs, Va., are the Naval Attache of the Italian Embassy and the Marchioness of Sant'Orsola, who will leave tomorrow and return on Monday. On June 8 they will leave with their two children for Sugar Hill, N. H., to spend the summer.

The Ambassador of Italy, Signor Augusto Rosso, will remain in town, as he will have as his guest over the week-end Signor Andrea Ferrero, former Secretary of the Embassy, who is now consul in Pittsburgh. Until his transfer last winter, Signor Ferrero kept bachelor quarters in a house on Newark street with the First Secretary of the Embassy, Signor Bartolomeo Migone, and the former Secretary of the Embassy, Signor Giuseppe Tommasi, who is now with the government press bureau in Rome.

Frau Scholz, wife of the First Secretary of the German Embassy, will leave today for New York, where she will see her house guest, Miss Olly Oberhummer, off to her home in Germany. Immediately on her return to Washington she and Herr Scholz will go to the country for the week-end.

The two sports-loving secretaries of the Spanish Embassy, Senor Don Luis Oliveres and Senor Don Ramon Padilla, who seldom miss a football or tennis match, will go to the Germantown Cricket Club, near Philadelphia, to watch the tennis match between the American and Australian teams to decide which one will go to England for the Davis Cup play. Mr. Claude de Boisanger, Second Secretary of the French Embassy, is planning a post-Memorial Day celebration. He will go to New York on Monday to inspect the Queen Mary.

The Assistant Secretary of Commerce, Col. John Monroe Johnson, and Mrs. Johnson, who are living at the Shoreham, will go to New York on Sunday to be members of the party welcoming the Queen Mary. Col. Johnson will be in the group flying out to greet the ship and its distinguished company, and he and Mrs. Johnson will be the guests of Sir Percy E. Bates at a dinner on board the ship Tuesday evening.

Many dinner parties are scheduled on the calendars of those remaining in town over the week-end. Representative and Mrs. John J. Dempsey will entertain a company of 12 at the Shoreham Saturday evening and Mr. Charles Hoyt March, a member of the Federal Trade Commission, and Mrs. March will be hosts at a dinner party for 26 at the hotel.

On the same evening, Col. and Mrs. Rowan P. Lemly will entertain for a company of 28 at the Shoreham, in honor of Col. and Mrs. H. C. Pillsbury, who have been ordered to Panama, and Col. and Mrs. George Law, who are leaving soon for their new post at Carlisle, Pa.

Sir Ian Fraser Flies To New York Today

St. Dunstan's Chairman and His Wife Visited Here.

Sir Ian and Lady Fraser, of London, are returning to New York by airplane this morning after a short stay at the Shoreham.

Sir Ian, chairman of St. Dunstan's, the organization which cares for blinded soldiers of the British Empire, came to Washington with Dr. Ernest Whitfield, representing the National Institute for the Blind of Great Britain, and with Mr. M. C. Migel, of New York, president of the American Foundation for the Blind, to confer with Dr. Herbert Putnam, of the Library of Congress, on standardizing reading methods for the blind.

Sir Ian is a member of Parliament, his seat being North St. Pancras. He and Lady Fraser will spend a few days in Canada before sailing June 5 on the Queen Mary for England.

Commander James M. Irish, U. S. N., and Mrs. Irish have come to the Martinique from New York for a brief visit.

MORE INVITES

For Girls Who Feel Fit

Men like girls who are full of life and spirit and always ready for a good time. They invite them everywhere. And seldom seek out the girl who is cross and irritable on certain days of every month.

If you would like more invites, take a tip from these modern girls and carry a tin of Acquin in your purse at all times. These merciful tablets work wonders for women who suffer from "regular" pains. Quickly relaxing thousands of tiny nerve ends thruout the body, Acquin rapidly soothes away the torturing headaches, backaches, cramps and general "let-down" feeling that "regular" pains bring . . . leave you feeling fit for the things you like to do. There's no quinine in Acquin . . . no opiates, no narcotics, nothing to upset the stomach. Get a tin of 12 for 25c at any good drug counter.

Society Awaits Horse Shows; First Saturday

Boxholders for Fort Myer Event Memorial Day Are Announced.

Two horse shows in which Washingtonians are interested will be the annual Army Relief show on Saturday at Fort Myer and the Riding and Hunt Club show at the Meadowbrook grounds on June 6.

The latter show will have nine classes and a champion hunter and champion jumper to be chosen for the show.

The first class will be for ladies' hunters over 3½ to 4 foot fences, in which performance will count 50 per cent. The next three classes are open to all and will include open jumping, open hunters and scurry in which the jumps will not exceed 4 feet and the fastest time wins.

The saddle class is limited to horses and riders who have not won a ribbon in either a recognized or unrecognized show. In the sixth class, for working hunters, the riders will be required to remove the top rail before jumping. Hunter hacks will be shown at a walk, trot, canter and gallop. International rules will be applied to the next-to-the-last class for open jumping.

The conditions of the last class, a novelty class, for which the entry is free, will be announced at the beginning of the show at 1:30 o'clock.

The Ambassador of Italy, Signor Augusto Rosso, heads the list of boxholders for the Army Relief horse show. Other boxholders include the Ambassador of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, Mr. Alexander Troyanovsky; the Ambassador of China, Dr. Sao-Ke Alfred Sze; the Charge d'Affaires of Poland and Mme. Sokolowska, the Chief of Staff of the Army, Gen. Malin Craig; the Military Attache of the German Embassy and Frau von Boetticher, the Secretary of the Yugoslavian Legation and Mme. Perazic, Brig. Gen. C. D. Roberts, Mrs. George Van Horn Moseley, Mrs. David J. Rumbough, Mr. and Mrs. George Hewitt Myers, Mr. and Mrs. Keith Merrill, Mrs. Lloyd W. Townsend and Mr. and Mrs. Ord Preston.

Mrs. Van Hagan Lectures Tomorrow

She Will Tour in Orient, Study Conditions.

Mrs. Lydia Van Hagan, who will leave Washington early next week for a motor trip to California, will present her last review of the season tomorrow at 11:30 a. m. in the supper club of the Shoreham Hotel on "World Events as Reflected in Current Literature."

"Togo and the Rise of Japanese Sea Power," by Edwin A. Falk, and "the Philippine Commonwealth," by George A. Malcolm, will be reviewed and three new novels discussed.

On August 31, Mrs. Van Hagan will sail for the Orient, where she will travel and study conditions for four months, returning to Washington to begin her lecture season in January.

Rural Women Open Conclave Here Saturday

6,500 Country Housewives From All Over World to Attend Convention.

The largest convention of women the Capital ever has entertained will be opened Saturday when the Associated Country Women of the World, composed of rural housewives from 22 foreign countries and the United States, begins its third triennial meeting.

Approximately 6,500 women are expected to attend, coming from such widely separated points as Ceylon and Germany, Palestine and Norway, Southern Rhodesia and Latvia, and from every section of the United States.

This will be the first meeting on American soil. When plans for the convention were made an attendance of 2,000 seemed likely, but the lure of a visit to the National Capital swelled the number. More than three times that number are coming.

Mrs. Roosevelt to Speak.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt will address the women and, with President Roosevelt, will entertain them at a White House garden party Monday. The conference will be opened formally Monday noon with Secretary of State Hull and Secretary of Agriculture Wallace welcoming the delegates.

Although the convention will end the night of June 5, many of the visitors will remain an additional week to inspect rural homes and community activities in Maryland and Virginia.

The purpose of the organization, formed seven years ago by affiliating 75 national groups of farm women, is to exchange ideas on promoting health and happiness in rural life.

Experts will address the conference on the country woman's relation to economics; on rural unemployment, marketing of home-made and produced products, health and library services for farms, education for country life, and electricity's place in rural communities.

Cook Book Compiled.

The women have compiled as a cooperative effort a cook book, "Food in the Country Home." Filled with recipes and food lore from all over the world, it will be presented to the convention as volume V in a series known as "What the Country Women of the World Are Doing."

At their two previous triennial conferences—in Vienna and Stockholm—delegates exchanged handicraft methods with the idea of helping to bring cash to the farm. As examples, the Dutch clubs helped those in New Zealand to start their own bulb industry, and Swedish clubs taught those in western Canada how to make wooden toys. There will be similar exchanges here.

Clubs Started in 1870.

Farm women's clubs in this country began to be formed about 1870 as rural housewives started to attend farm institutes with their husbands. In 1914 the groups gained impetus when President Wilson signed the Smith-Lever bill providing money for home demonstration agents.

Since then clubs in Southern States have done much toward teaching farm women and girls to raise food for the table, to preserve and market it and to run dairy and poultry farms.

In the Northern States, where agriculture already was diversified, the clubs have concentrated on sanitation, meal planning and sewing.

Foreign delegates will register at the Willard Hotel. Business sessions will be held at the Government Auditorium on Constitution avenue between Twelfth and Fourteenth streets.

What Kind of Planks In the GOP Platform?

ONE item that's certain to touch off plenty of fireworks at the Republican National Convention nine days from now is the little matter of "planks" . . . campaign issues that may be nailed into the G O P platform.

But—while convention spielers groom pet projects for presentation to delegates assembled and prepare for convention "horse-trading" in issues—

How does the average American voter feel about issues that may become planks in party platforms?

This Sunday we'll tell you—in AMERICA SPEAKS. We'll also give you a final pre-convention report on the popularity among Republican voters of leading candidates for the G O P nomination. Our information comes from impartial nation-wide polls conducted by the American Institute of Public Opinion.

★ ★ ★

What the voters think may not influence the action of convention delegates. But the platform built at the Cleveland meeting certainly will affect the support given the Republican candidate next November.

That's why you'll want to know how the man-in-the-street . . . whether he's walking Broadway or a Kansas furrow . . . feels today about platform planks and campaign issues. You'll find the FACTS about nation-wide public opinion in these matters in

Viaduct Plan Is Due to Get Early Action

Data on K Street Plans Being Gathered for Commissioners.

Alternative Proposal Is Highway on Bed of Old Canal.

A proposal to construct a high-level viaduct over K street northwest from Twenty-ninth street to Key Bridge will be acted on soon by the District Commissioners as a solution to Georgetown traffic congestion.

Capt. Herbert C. Whitehurst, director of highways atnd principal advocate of the viaduct plan, is engaged in preparation of preliminary plans and estimates of costs for Col. Dan I. Sultan, Engineer Commissioner.

The viaduct has been proposed as a substitute for the proposed automobile highway over the bed of the old Chesapeake & Ohio Canal from its eastern terminus to the juncture of Foxhall and Canal roads. William A. Roberts, people's counsel, is the prime sponsor of that plan, which has been under consideration for some time.

Officials of the National Capital Parks office also favor use of the canal bed as a highway but they would carry the roadway all the way to Cumberland. Roberts is opposed to carrying it beyond Foxhall road contending the old canal should be preserved for its esthetic value. The District does not have title to the canal bed.

The Whitehurst viaduct plan calls for building the structure over the steam railroad tracks and roadway on K street with a clover leaf arrangement at Key Bridge. Some of the opposition to it is based on estimates of its relatively high cost. Capt. Whitehurst said no definite estimate of cost could yet be made. Some others have placed its cost at $1,000,000 or as much as $2,000,000.

A third plan which the Commissioners are to consider is the recommendation of Edward A. Dent, District surveyor, to cut Prospect street through so that it would connect with the western end of Pennsylvania avenue and from Thirty-seventh street to Foxhall road.

Each of the plans is designed to relieve present congestion on M street and each contains allowances by its proponents for variations.

Poor U. S. Fish

They Must Be Protected From Subversive Species.

A selective immigration policy to safeguard native fish from the subversive influences of alien species imported from other haunts was announced yesterday by A. E. Demaray, acting director of the Nation Park Service.

Introduction of alien fish in the lakes and streams of our national parks usually has resulted in a disruption of the balance of nature prevailing in those streams, with disastrous results to the breeding of the natives.

To check this subversive undermining of American fish institutions the park service has forbidden the introduction of exotic species of fish into waters which contain at present only native varieties.

Where native and alien fish exist side by side, native species are to be "definitely encouraged" while birth control methods will be applied to the exotics.

Roses, But Not for Teacher

Pupils of John Burroughs School held their own rose show yesterday. Admiring the blooms are Nancy Avery, Miss M. A. Zimmer, teacher; Joan Jeffrey and Phyllis Dellastious.

Young Rose Fanciers Strive For Burroughs School Prizes

The rose fanciers of John Burroughs School brought their finest blooms to teacher yesterday—but not to court her favor.

It was anual rose day for the school named after America's most famous nature lover, and the boys and girls were out for prize ribbons. More than 200 of them brought their pink, white, red and yellow specimens for the big horticultural event of the school's year.

The show was hardly a simple affair. The entries were put through a series of eliminations before reaching the ribbon stage. First they were brought to class, where teacher and pupil selected the best bouquets to represent the room in school show.

One by one the classes marched into the auditorium and arranged their selected pieces in groups, dividing the blooms according to color, size, type of bouquet, etc. Then it was up to Dr. James A. Gamble, president of the Potomac Rose Society, to pick the winners in each classification. He was judge of the show.

At the very moment that scores of Americans were hoping breathlessly that some horse running the Epsom Downs Sweepstakes in England might win for them extravagant cash prizes, John Burroughs' pupils were breathlessly awaiting Dr. Gamble's decisions. Gold and blue ribbons were at stake.

Dr. Gamble placed a gold and blue ribbon (the colors are the school's) on the best entry in each group; a blue ribbon on the second best, and a gold one on those taking third pace.

There were 14 winners of the coveted gold and blue ribbon. Carol Lynn Rice won first place in class 1, pink roses; Norma Jean Short won first place in-class 2, also pink roses, and other first awards were made as follows:

Class 3, yellow roses, Helen Jeffries; class 4, white roses, Ann McMahan; class 5, other colors, Frances LaRoche; class 6, five blooms, one variety, Billy Westmoreland; class 7, five blooms, different varieties, Marilyn Collier; class 8, climbing roses, Mary F. Kane; class 9, basket of roses, Billy Stickel; class 10, vase of roses, Gwen Strong; class 11, bowl of roses, Norma E. Heyser; class 12, mixed flowers, Eugene Burgess; class 13, miniatures, not more than 3 inches, Ursula Ritchie, and class 14, miniatures, not more than 6 inches, Edward Huntmire.

"It's the finest show I ever judged—and that means it was the hardest," commented Dr. Gamble, as he offered for inspection one of the several "perfect" blooms he found in the exhibit.

Auto Mechanics Extend Strike To 14 Concerns

Two More Shops Join List; Jury Trials Asked by Accused Quartet.

The strike of Washington automobile mechanics spread to two more shops yesterday. The number of shops now affected is 14.

Oliver N. Garrison, business manager of the International Mechanists Union, said he expected the walkout to reach every shop that refused demands of 90 cents an hour, a 44-hour week and time-and-a-half for overtime work.

Meanwhile, jury trials were demanded by four striking automobile mechanics when they were arraigned in Police Court on assault charges.

Pleading not guilty to charges of assaulting Harry L. Ferguson, another mechanic, employed by the Mandell Chevrolet Co., Thirteenth street and Good Hope road southeast, the men were released in bonds of $100 each pending trial. They were George Berry, 800 block Portland street southeast; L. Kane, 1300 block Massachusetts avenue northwest; H. D. Kane, 1300 block M street northwest, and E. K. Sherman, 1700 block Sixteenth street southeast.

According to charges, the men, members of the machinists' union now on strike, entered the Mandell shop and attacked Ferguson. Union officials, however, insist the men were granted permission to enter the shop in order to obtain overalls and tools left behind when they walked out. Ferguson, the strikers claim, "made a pass at them."

Mrs. John Boyle, jr., chairman of the Consumers Council of Washington, declared last night that consumers have an immediate and important interest in the strike of the machinists employed by the automobile repair shops.

She announced last night the appointment of a special committee of the executive board of the council to investigate the controversy and report next Tuesday on its findings.

Dr. Luther Gives G. U. Goethe Bust for Library

Dr. Hans Luther, Ambassador of Germany, yesterday made a gift of bust of Goethe, the great German philosopher, to the Rev. Arthur A. O'Leary, S. J., president of Georgetown University, for the college library.

The presentation was made on behalf of the ambassador by Dr. Anton Lang, jr. professor of German at Georgetown. Father O'Leary was formerly librarian of the college. Several rare volumes also were presented by the ambassador.

House Group Asks Transit Investigation

Resolution Asks Utility Provide Primary Service for U. S. Workers.

Committee Orders Study of Girls' Training School Needs.

A Congressional investigation of mass transportation in the District, with the aim of forcing the Capital Transit Co. to render its primary service to Government employes, was promised yesterday after the House District Committee had adopted an authorizing resolution.

Representative Wright Patman (Democrat), of Texas, as chairman of the sub-committee on traffic, said that the committee mandate will be considered at once, although he may turn the inquiry over to one of the sub-committee members, as he did the traffic investigation.

"I should like to conduct the inquiry myself, though, for one reason," he added.

"I always have held to the theory that the agencies of the National Capital should be made to serve the Government employes and the functions of the Federal Government first of all. Things are getting so now, however, that lobbyists and persons with nothing to do are crowding out the workers and are interfering with the efficiency of the Federal Government.

The new transportation inquiry was suggested by Representative Hull, who a week before complained at a committee meeting about the crowded condition of street cars and buses.

His resolution, as adopted, reads: "That the sub-committee on transportation be and is hereby authorized to investigate and report upon the sufficiency of street car and bus transportation systems in the District of Columbia; that the investigation shall be of such scope that the sub-committee on transportation may, in its report, make appropriate recommendations as to what should be done, either by the transportation companies or the government of the District of Columbia, to so improve conditions that the steadily increasing population of the District shall have a modern up-to-date system for convenient transportation."

The House District Committee at the same time ordered an investigation of the physical needs of the National Training School for Girls, in which Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt has taken an interest, and named a special sub-committee to inspect the institution.

The sub-committee is headed by Representative Norton, chairman of the full committee, and includes Representatives Carpenter (Democrat), of Kansas, and Hull (Progressive), of Wisconsin.

The Kansan proposed the inquiry as a means of determining the needs of the school and methods of fulfilling them.

The committee unexpectedly reported favorably a bill to authorize construction of a new building for the recorder of deeds, but added an amendment limiting the cost to $500,000. The bill was indorsed by Acting Corporation Counsel Vernon E. West.

Chevy Chase Bank May Pay Off 100%

A plan whereby depositors in the defunct Chevy Chase Savings Bank would be paid 100 per cent of original deposits, without interest, now is being attempted, it was announced yesterday by Paul Slemon, attorney for the bank.

Depositors already have been paid 80 per cent of their deposits.

Under the plan, which has been approved by Comptroller of Currency J. F. T. O'Connor, directors and stockholders would supply a sum, which, combined with other assets, would be sufficient to pay depositors the remaining 20 per cent.

Woman's Death In the Potomac Baffles Police

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald yesterday still was investigating the death of Miss Anna Halvin, 24, of the 1100 black of Sixth street northwest, whose body was found floating in the Potomac Tuesday under mysterious circumstances.

The police also were baffled by the case and worked on several theories.

Miss Halvin might have taken her own life after a lover's quarrel, they said, adding that she was seen just before dawn Saturday in a Virginia night club by Mrs. Betty Carr, neighbor and friend, who identified the body.

The victim was with a friend employed at the Navy Yard the night she disappeared, Mrs. Carr asserted. She had been despondent for several days following a quarrel with her fiance, a Pullman conductor, Mrs. Carr added.

Questioned yesterday, John Halvin, brother of the dead girl, said he could think of no reason why she should wish to take her life.

One-Man Car Issue to Get P.U.C. Airing

Battle on Old Problem Will Be Resumed at Hearing in June.

Traction Line Will Press for Early Decision to Aid Recovery.

The battle over one-man street cars, which has been waged for several years, will be resumed next month at a public hearing before the Public Utilities Commission.

Date of the hearing has not been definitely fixed, but it probably will be held on June 16, it was said.

Decision of the commission to call a hearing was prompted by a request from the Capital Transit Co. for approval by the commission of the purchase of 20 second-hand one-man street cars. The cars are to be bought from the Providence (R. I.) Street Car Co., which is abandoning its cars in favor of buses.

Purchase price of the cars is to be $1,800 each, plue one-half of the freight cost delivered in Washington. John H. Hanna, president of the Capital Transit Co., said about $3,000 additional would be expended for improvements on each car. When the contemplated work had been done, he said, the cars would be equipped with the most modern safety devices and equipment for comfort and convenience of riders.

The company has had pending before the commission for some time a request that approval be given to future operation of its 20 modern street cars as one-man cars. These are the new type cars, especially noticeable because they are streamlined and are much less noisy than the old cars.

This request will be considered at the public hearing. So, too, will be the purchase of 30 second-hand one-man cars recently by the company. These are to replace old and worn one-man cars.

Richmond B. Keech, vice chairman of the commission, said it was intended to make the hearing a well-rounded consideration of the entire subject of one-man versus two-man street car operation. Some time ago the commission undertook to get the opinions and experiences of companies in other cities where the one-man car was put in operation.

Reports of companies which had adopted the one-man cars were favorable. The companies emphasized their necessity because they were cheaper to operate. Hanna already has told the commission that purchase and operation of the 20 new one-man cars would not mean the dismissal of any employes. The cars would be put in use gradually, he said.

The commission has asked the company to furnish data on the experience of other cities in which there is 100 per cent one-man car operation, effect of the one-man cars on accidents, on speed and to estimate what the effect would be in Washington.

Hanna already has said he believed the one-man cars would result in better service because of the faster acceleration and stopping.

An Imaginative Market Day

Josephine Is Second of Twins In 2 Years to Win Art Laurels

Those Henderson twins are at it again. Last year 12-year-old Floranne won first prize at the annual exhibition of the Yard School of Art, and her sister, Josephine, came in with an honorable mention. This year Josephine climbed to first place, and, while the judging hasn't been completed, Floranne is expected to win a couple of honors.

As though it weren't enough to have the same family win first prize for two consecutive years, the same subject captured the judges' interest in both exhibitions.

Although the Henderson twins, daughters of Col. and Mrs. Paul Henderson, of 3201 Woodland drive, have been to market they sat right in the studio at the Yard School, 2117 Leroy place, while they painted their market scenes.

That procedure is in keeping with the idea of the school's director, Miss Margaret Yard, that the imaginative approach is the thing to emphasize in art.

"I want creative, not photographic work," said dynamic Miss Yard yesterday, sitting on the floor in an orange smock sorting pictures to be hung in the school's seventh annual exhibition. The show opens today and will continue for a week and a half from 9:30 a. m. to 9:30 p. m. daily.

Adults as well as youngsters who study at the Yard School are compelled to exercise their imaginations by making up pictures out of their heads. Models are posed in front of a blank screen so that the pupils will have to make up their own backgrounds.

"The whole business is like music," explained Miss Yard. "The model is only the theme. Each pupil sets a different tempo and composes different variations."

The process of depending upon one's imagination is much easier for the children than for the adults, the director of the school has learned. She showed pictures painted by boys and girls of 12 or less to prove her point.

Madge Erving, daughter of Mrs. Esther Erving, of 2229 Bancroft place northwest, has portrayed such amusing fantasies as ostriches going to church and cats singing on a fence. She has also made an interesting wallpaper design of bugs.

Elizabeth Fish, daughter of Representative and Mrs. Hamilton Fish, jr., of New York, has painted a group of penguins at a party. Elsie Thompson, daughter of Mrs. H. C. Thompson, while in the studio on a mild spring afternoon, painted a realistic coasting scene with children and sleds all over a snow-packed hill.

Senate Group Favors ADA Use of Funds

Committee Acts to Keep Alley Unit a Year on Lower Basis.

Authority Would Be Allowed to Spend Its Revenue.

Continuance of the work of the Alley Dwelling Authority for another fiscal year, though on a limited scale, appeared assured yesterday when the Senate Appropriations Committee reappropriated funds on hand and authorized the agency to utilize all revenue it obtains from sales, leases, or other sources prior to June 30, 1937.

The provision was included in the first deficiency appropriations bill. It was accepted by John Ihlder, ADA administrator, during hearings on the measure several weeks ago after the House had refused to appropriate the $300,000 recommended by the Budget Bureau.

Chairman Buchanan, of the House Appropriations Committee, has stated he will accept the Senate amendment as it does not constitute a new appropriation.

The Senate also added $4,137.99 to the $888,688.74 voted by the House for miscellaneous expenses of the District government. The new items:

Ihlder stated that the Alley Dwelling Authority will have about $250,000 under the compromise provision and will be able to continue its slum-clearance work upon practically the same basis as at present but without contemplated expansion.

While no official statement has been made, it is expected that legislation amending the organic act of the ADA will be introduced next year so that new appropriations beyond the original $500,000 may be obtained.

It was the contention of the House that the organic act restricted the agency to the initial appropriation despite the fact that the Comptroller General had permitted the President to allocate $200,000 from Federal relief funds.

Haynes Awarded Technical Knockout as Carnera Quits in 9th

Ankle Injury Is Claimed By Loser

By the United Press.

Ebbets Field, Brooklyn, May 27. Leroy (Howitzer) Haynes, Philadelphia Negro, tonight battered pathetic Primo Carnera about the ring until the Italian man mountain quit in the ninth round, claiming an injured ankle. This gave Haynes his second technical knockout victory over Primo within three months.

They were scheduled to fight 10 rounds, but after 40 seconds of the ninth, Primo, bleeding slightly from the mouth, and staggering helplessly under a merciless bombardment, suddenly threw up his arms and lurched away from Haynes toward his corner.

Referee Arthur Donovan sprang toward the retreating former heavyweight champion, and tried to hold him in the ring, asking what was the matter. Primo merely pointed toward his left ankle, and half-pulled Donovan to the corner.

No Injury Found.

Dr. George B. Reilz, a physician at the ringside, examined Primo's ankle in the corner after the huge shoe had been removed. He reported that he could find no broken bone or dislocation. He said, however, that a muscle might have been pulled out of place.

It was the second time that Primo had claimed the alibi of an injured ankle. After Maxie Baer floored him 11 times and won the title from him, Primo kept his ankle in a cast for several weeks, claiming it was broken early in the bout.

Although Haynes required longer to make Primo quit tonight than he did in their first meeting at Philadelphia in March, he had the big fellow on the verge of a knockout during most of the bout. Primo

Radiophoto: Aga Khan Leads English Derby Winner

500,000 See Mahmoud Set Derby Record As Aga Khan's Horses Run First and Second

By the Associated Press.

Epsom Downs, Eng., May 27.—Mahmoud, a rangy grey colt, shifted into high on Epsom's final killing hill today and carried the silks of the Aga Khan, wealthy Indian potentate, to a record-breaking victory in the Derby for the second successive year.

Heading out of the pack at the top of the homestretch, the grey flash stepped to the front and was never threatened through the final quarter of a mile as he turned in the fastest time in the 156 year-history of the three-year-old classic.

With Charley Smirke handling the reins, Mahmoud was clocked in 2:33 4-5, one-fifth of a second faster than the record established by Hyperion in 1933 and equalled the year following by Windsor Lad.

To make the victory of the Moslem religious leader more complete, Taj Akbar, considered the ace of the stable, was second, three lengths back. Then came Mrs. James Shand's Thankerton, an outsider, and Lord Astor's Pay Up, the favorite, showing the way to 18 other colts which started the one and one-half mile journey with the Down's four-decked stands, the infield and the surrounding hillsides packed by some 500,000 spectators.

Boswell Is Sixteenth.

William Woodward's Boswell, America's hope in the race and the medium of a last-minute plunge in the wagering which reduced his odds to 7 to 1, could do no better than sixteenth.

Boswell started as if to justify his heavy backing by racing well up with the leaders for a half-mile. From fourth place he gradually dropped back, however. Whatever chance he had faded at famous Tattenham Corner, leading into the homestretch, where he was pocketed and forced far back.

Mahmoud's victory, duplicating last year's triumph of Bahram, marked the eighth time in the history of the race and the first time since 1894-95 that an owner has won the classic in successive years. The Aga Khan also won the 1930 running with Blenheim, sire of today's victor.

For the first time in years the British monarch was not on hand to congratulate the victorious owner. The glass-enclosed royal box was banked with flowers, but its rail, where the late King George and Queen Mary used to stand with leveled glasses, remained deserted. Court mourning precluded King Edward's attendance.

Carioca, carrying the hopes of the Maharaja of Rajpipla, who won with Windsor Lad in 1934, was largely responsible for the record time. He broke from the barrier in front and for a half-mile set a sizzling pace. Midstream, Abjer, Pay Up and Boswell were not far behind. In the midst of the closely-bunched pack, Mahmoud and Taj Akbar, ridden by England's foremost jockey, Gordon Richards, were settling in their stride.

The Maharaja's colt quickly shot his bolt, however. Together with Midstream, Boswell and Abjer, he dropped back as Thomas Burns took Thankerton to the front.

Going down the hill leading to Tattenham Corner, Thankerton was three lengths to the good. He held the same margin as he swung into the homestretch in full view of the packed stands, with Bala Hissar in second place, running strongest of the Aga Khan's triple-entry.

Then, almost without warning, Mahmoud, a gray streak, flashed to the front. A crack of the whip, a few swift strides and Mahmoud held an advantage of three lengths. Taj Akbar challenged strongly in the final quarter of a mile, but Mahmoud, the horse many said would not go the distance, easily held on. Taj Akbar beat off Thankerton by three-quarters of a length.

World Labor Track Meet Planned

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 27.—As an outgrowth of the controversy over American participation in the Olympic games, Charles Ornstein, one of the leaders of the unsuccessful boycott movement, today announced plans for a "world labor athletic carnival" in the city-owned Randalls Island Stadium August 15-16.

The dates for the two-day competition, which Ornstein said would receive the approval of William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, coincide with the last two days of the Olympic games in Berlin. This virtually precludes participation by American or foreign international track and field stars.

"There will be plenty of first-class athletics, who will be unsuccessful in the Olympic trials, to draw from," Ornstein said. Associated with Ornstein in preparation for the games are Jeremiah T. Mahoney, former president of the National A. A. U. and co-leader with Ornstein in the boycott fight; Dr. Randolph Manning, president of the U. S. Football Association; Mel Sheppard, former Olympic 800 meter champion, and Daniel J. Ferris, secretary-treasurer of the A. A. U.

"I agreed to serve in an advisory capacity," Ferris said, "on the assurance that there will be no attempt to interfere with the American Olympic trials or the Olympic games themselves."

Ferris, if and when authorized, will extend invitations to foreign athletics.

U. S. Golfer Wins Over Favorite

Former Scottish Titlist Bows to Sweeney in British Play.

By the Associated Press.

St. Andrews, Scotland, May 27.—Tall, curly haired Robert Sweeny, American-born youngster who has lived in London for several years, removed the Scottish favorite, Jack McLean, from the British amateur golf championship in sensational style today and earned a berth for himself in the round of 32.

Overlooked in pre-tournament calculations although he reached the semifinals last year before bowing to Lawson Little, Sweeny dissipated an overwhelming lead in the late stages of his fourth round match with McLean and then came back to win, one up, at the twentieth hole.

Tomorrow he will face Edward F. Storey, 34-year-old Englishman, three times a member of the British Walker Cup team. Storey sprang an upset of his own when he defeated Leonard Crawley, one up, in his fourth round test.

Sweeny, an Oxford Blue in 1932, won his third round match with Lord Charles Hope this morning, 5 and 4, but there were none who conceded him much chance against McLean this afternoon. McLean, former Scottish titleholder, British Walker Cup hope, and a first-class shot-maker, had been rated co-favorite with another Scot, Hector Thomson, ever since the current championship opened.

But the young American got away to a 3-hole lead on the outward journey and gained what looked to be an insurmountable advantage when he captured the thirteenth to lead four up with only five to go.

Here, however, he struck a sudden spell of wildness, visited bunker or rough on four of the next five holes and allowed McLean to square the match at the eighteenth.

They halved the first extra hole in fours but McLean apparently had the match in hand at the twentieth when Sweeny's second landed into a bunker. The American, however, exploded dead, sank his first putt and won hole and match when the Scottish star three-putted.

The only other Americans left in the field passed out of the picture in this morning's play. Douglas Grant, the former Californian who has lived in England for many years, was beaten by P. W. L. Risdon, 6 and 5. Theodore Bassett, of Rye, N. Y., failed to report for his third round match.

While McLean was being shunted to the sidelines, several other of the prime favorites, including Cyril Tolley and Roger Wethered, former titleholders both; Thompson, Sam McKinlay, Harry Bentley and the Australian threat, James Ferrier, advanced safely into the fifth round.

Sarazen Is Beaten In Bay State Open

Fitchburg, Mass., May 27 (AP).—Sandy-haired Harold (Jug) McSpaden, Winchester pro, captured the Massachusetts open golf championship today, deposing defending titleholder Gene Sarazen.

Sarazen finished in a three-way tie with Bob Crowley, of Norfolk, who was deadocked with mashie going into today's round, and last year's runner-up Guy Paulsen, Springfield pro. The three carded 297 for fourth.

Colonial Tennis Team Meets Pittsburgh Today

There is every reason why the George Washington University tennis team should "do its durndest" in today's match against the University of Pittsburgh at Columbia Country Club. A win would not only enable the Colonials to finish the season above .500, but would give the locals the edge in a two-out-of-three series with Pitt.

College Stars to Guard Lives at Glen Echo Pool

A collegiate array of athletes will bedeck the sides of Glen Echo's famous Crystal Pool this summer in the person of brawny lifeguards. Supervised by Boyd Hickman, a star guard at George Washington University a few years ago, the squad numbers a flock of gridmen from Eastern schools.

Nats Play Macks In Twin Bill Today

Washington fans will be treated to the first double-header of the big league season here today when the Nats and the Athletics resume their series.

Seizing upon yesterday's light rain as ample excuse for a twin bill today with its added gate receipts, Washington Club officials hung out the "no game" sign early in the afternoon.

The Nats today will be attempting to extend to seven straight their triumphs over the A's this season. Five times the two teams have met and five times the Nats have won.

Buck Newsom will go to the mound in the first game, seeking that sixth victory of the year which has eluded him in his last two starts. Jimmy DeShong will pitch the second game. Newsom will be opposed by Harry Kelley, diminutive Mack rookie right-hander. The left-handed Vernon Wilshere is expected to pitch the second game for the A's.

Yankees Beat Red Sox in 11th, 9-8

By the Associated Press.

Boston, May 27.—The New York Yankees fought off the Red Sox's attack on the American League lead in an 11-inning slugfest today, winning, 9 to 8, to boost their pace-setting margin to a game and a half.

The batters had all the better of it, as the Yanks collected 12 hits off three Sox hurlers, and Boston had 13, including Jimmy Foxx's thirteenth homer of the season, from four New York throwers. Joe DiMaggio, Yank rookie star, also hit for the circuit.

The Yanks went way out in front in the early innings, by splurges of four runs in the first and three in the second, but Boston caught up in the seventh, and from there on the battle was a ding-dong affair to the end.

The winning run came when Red Rolfe singled Frank Crosetti across after the New York shortstop had walked and stolen second.

Manager Joe Cronin got into the Boston line-up for the first time since he fractured a thumb early in April. He stayed four innings and then gave the shortstopping duties over to John Kroner.

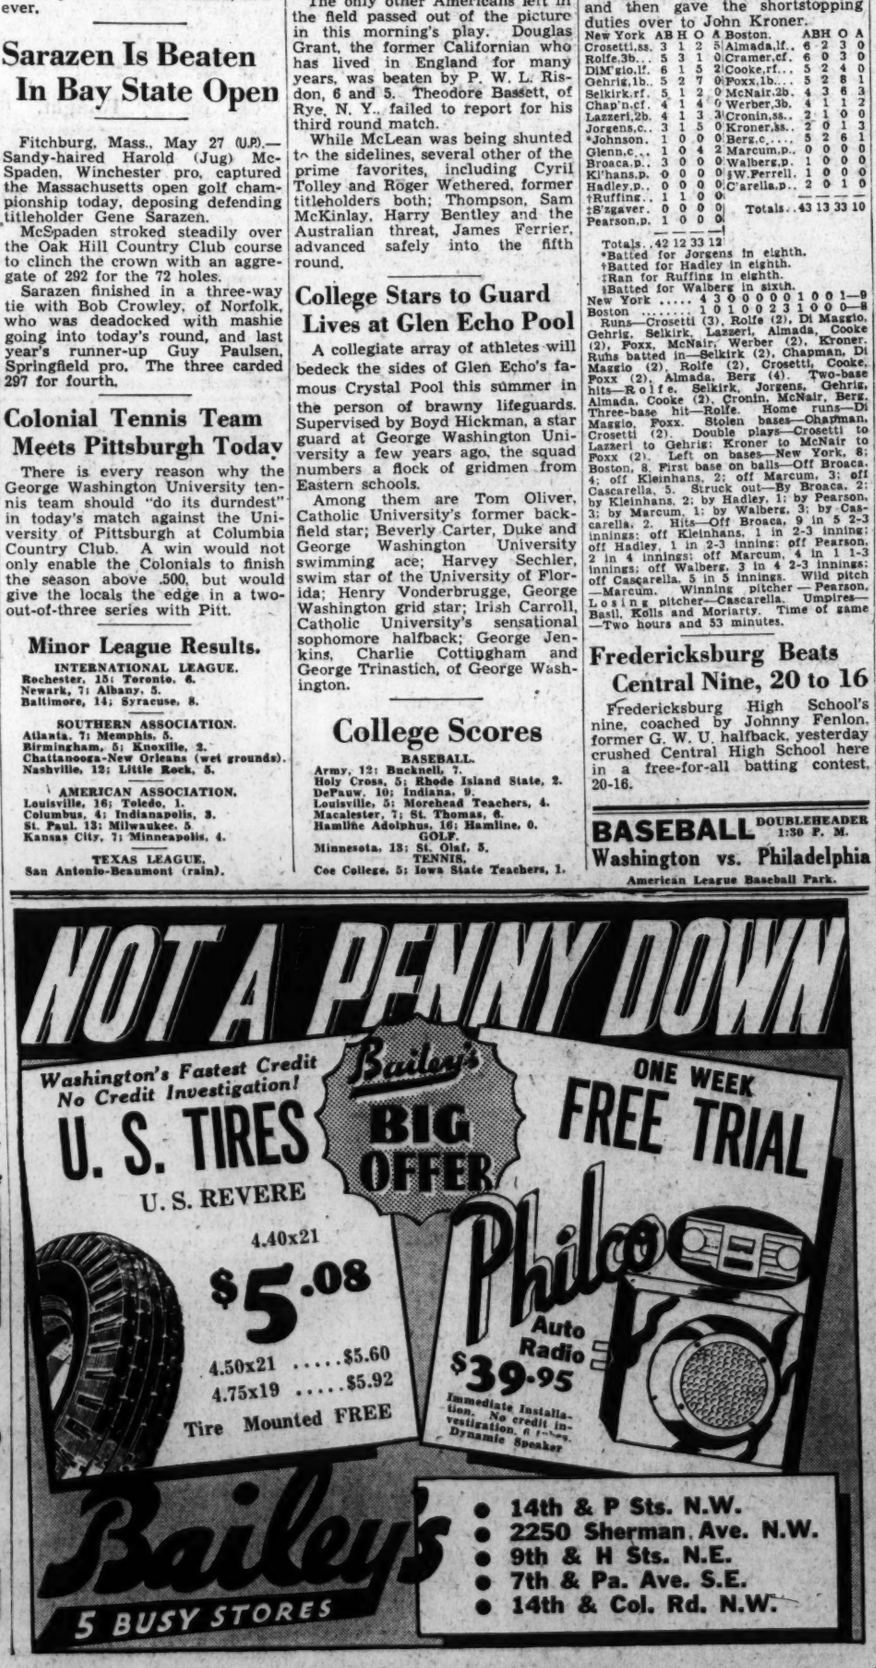
BASEBALL DOUBLEHEADER 1:30 P. M.
Washington vs. Philadelphia
American League Baseball Park.



This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich.

LEST a day pass without mention of Buddy Lewis, which would probably leave readers of these pages irreparably shocked, this department hastens to observe:

Many have been the ball players who have blazoned their names across the sports page headlines, but it remained for young Master Lewis alone to claim a newspaper's leading editorial—that space usually reserved for such heavy topics as the national budget, tripartite naval treaties, Hitlerism, fascism or the other isms which can be viewed with alarm.

POVICH.

That distinction was won by the beardless youth who plays third base for the Nats on May 23 when the Gastonia, N. C., Gazette, with pardonable pride devoted its editorial page mouthpiece entirely to Master Lewis and his exploits in the American League. And not long is the newspaper in pointing out that the 19-year-old lad is a home-town product, a graduate of the city's American Legion baseball series.

Gastonia, it seems, is mildly nuts about young Lewis. A correspondent, Mr. John J. Derr, informs this department that the chief topic of discussion in Gastonia County is "J. K.," as John Kelly (Buddy) Lewis is known in those parts. Furiously the citizens grab for the morning papers to read with bated breath how many hits rattled off his bat, how many brilliant plays he came up with at third base.

Kids that can barely talk are able to recite "J. K.'s" latest batting average, how many doubles, triples and home runs he has socked to date, how many bunts he has beaten out. Verily, the whole town is talking. Master Lewis has, indeed, provided the home folks with excellent morning reading. His .388 batting average, his long wallops in the pinches and his steadily brilliant play in the field have set Gastonia tongues to wagging ever since he donned a Washington uniform.

You know that they are considerably heated over Buddy Lewis down there when Mr. Derr, sports editor of the Gazette, points out with undisguised pride that "Lewis worked only two doors from the Gazette office last summer in the cotton office of Brown Wilson, local Legionnaire. Imagine Sports Editor Derr's uncontrollable joy if young Lewis had, perchance, been employed next door, smack bang against the Gazette office.

But this new-found fame of Buddy Lewis apparently comes as no surprise to Gastonia fans. Down in that country, folks realized back in 1931 that young Lewis, then a tender youth of 14, was cut out for a sensational major league career. He was with the Gastonia American Legion team then and promptly slugged his way into the captaincy of the team at the age of 16.

Buddy Lewis' feats with the Gastonia kids are now legendary in that section. Even in those days, "J. K." had a fond liking for extra-base knocks. The Gazette of August 26, 1935, relates how, in a contest with Elizabeth City in 1933, "J. K." slammed out a triple and two singles to win the game for Gastonia, 4-0. Fifteen days later he contributed two doubles and a single to his team's attack to win another game and at the end of the season he had gone to bat 30 times and made 15 hits for an even .500 average.

He was something of a fielder, too, it seems. In 36 chances during the series, he escaped an error for a perfect average of 1.000.

It was on August 17, 1933, according to the Gazette, that "J. K." hit for all the bases possible. On that day he slammed out a single, double, triple and homer and the report of the game goes on to say: "Incidentally, that home run of J. K. Lewis was the prettiest thing seen hereabouts in many a moon. It was the first time fans had seen a home run over the fence in that park. The ball easily cleared the gate in centerfield."

Great was the joy in Gastonia when, in midsummer of 1934, young Lewis was sent up to the big leagues for a month's workout with the New York Giants as a reward for his sensational play in the Legion series. But Gastonia waited in vain for the announcement that Manager Bill Terry had signed the lad to a contract.

Back to Gastonia he went to learn that Joe Engel, president of the Chattanooga club, was interested in his career. To Chattanooga he hustled, was given a uniform, told to play third base and held the job against all comers throughout 1935.

Washington fans may have greeted with undisguised skepticism the feats of "J. K." in the Nats' training camp last spring, but in Gastonia they occasioned no surprise. The folks down there kinda knew that "J. K." was a swell ball player.

Griffith Indicates Deal for Pitcher to Make Nats Contenders

Prexy Eyeing Knott and Hudlin

Unwilling to Include Nats' Regulars; Sees Club Worth Gamble.

Clark C. Griffith, extremely gratified by the upward surge of his Washington ball club within the last week which has seen his team win five out of six games, yesterday indicated strongly that the June 15 trading deadline would find the Nats with added pitching strength.

The silver-thatched owner of the Nats was even talking pennant as he recounted the team's successes and declared that his team was "as good as any in the league, barring pitching."

"It's a club I can afford to gamble with," Griffith declared with great emphasis. "One more pitcher and we'd be right in the thick of the pennant race. If we were hopelessly out of it, I'd try to develop a pitcher, but we're not. I'm going into the market for one."

With the affluent Boston Red Sox also trying to buy a pitcher and able to outbid Griffith by almost any margin, the Nats' chances of acquiring an additional hurler would be slim, but such is not the case, Griffith believes.

Chances to Get Hurler Good.

"There are some clubs in the league that won't sell to the Red Sox at any price," opined Griffith. "They don't want to strengthen a team that might make a runaway race out of it. They'd prefer to sell to a team like Washington."

The Nats' owner refuses to divulge the names of the pitchers he believes he can buy, but it is known that the Cleveland Indians have offered the Nats Willis Hudlin, and that the Browns have placed Jack Knott on the market.

The item holding up an immediate deal that would bring a pitcher to the Nats is the refusal of either the Indians or the Browns to do business on a cash basis. Both are demanding players in return and Griffith is constant in his refusal to give up a Washington regular.

Griffith now is in the same mood that prompted him to buy Earl McNeely from the Sacramento Club for $50,000 during the season of 1934. It was his firm belief that one more capable outfielder would bring the Nats a pennant and he considered McNeely worth the gamble. His willingness to invest now in a pitcher is founded on a stanch belief in the Nats' pennant prospects.

Phils Down Bees, 5-2, On Wilson's Pinch Hit

Philadelphia, May 27 (AP).—Manager Jimmy Wilson's pinch double in the eighth with the bases loaded broke up a 2-all deadlock and gave the Phillies a 5-to-2 win over the Boston Bees for a clean sweep in the short series.

'Get Thee From Behind Me'

When the Italian circus freak—who was jockeyed into a world heavyweight championship—limped to his corner tonight, unquestionably he had reached the end of the pugilistic trail. Because of his pathetic showing and march to the corner without being floored once, it is doubtful if Carnera ever will attempt another ring appearance—at least in America. He will sail for Italy on the Conte di Savoi on June 13, and probably enter the wrestling game.

Haynes, in his victory tonight, did little to increase his prestige or to indicate that he is a formidable menace to ether Champion James J. Braddock or shuffling Joe Louis. He could not fell the Sequals Tall Tower, and in three rounds did not show so well himself, when Primo attempted to make a fight of it.

Carnera weighed 265 to Haynes' 200½.

Cards Lose Lead, Bow to Pirates

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, May 27.—Pittsburgh's Buccaneers gained sweet revenge today for the double defeat of yesterday, slashing out 15 hits for an 11-to-2 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals.

The Pirates got to the veteran, Bill Hallahan, early and showed no regard for Mike Ryba, who replaced the left-hander in the fifth.

The defeat, plus the Giants' victory over the Dodgers, placed St. Louis and New York in a tie for first place.

Veritas, Heavily Backed Favorite, Cops Hagerstown Feature

Mare Wins by Nose Over Flosilda

Jockey Bond Is Thrown; 6,000 See 'Double' Pay $178.50.

By Walter Haight.

A Staff Correspondent.

Hagerstown, Md., May 27.—Veritas, foaled by Truthfulness, was true to the favorite players in the Williamsport, the day's feature race here in Maryland's rolling country. The 5-year-old mare kept her nose pointing straight ahead and that was her margin of victory over an up-and-coming little filly named Flosilda. Lady Buck was doing a lot of shuffling but third money was her best.

Veritas was the day's most popular betting proposition. The crowd of 6,000 wagered and then found forgotten bills in the far reaches of their purses and wagered again. When all was said and done and the numbers were posted, a $3.10 mutuel was in order.

Although the feature return was a mere trifle, the daily double paid off in Connecticut avenue figures. For each $2 invested came $178.50 in cash.

Challenge Futile.

Veritas hopped to the front virtually with the sound of the starting bell and she was not threatened until the early stretch. At this stage Flosilda came on with her game, but futile rally.

Running Water, owned by Mrs. D. S. Jenkins, easily defeated a cheap field in the first race over the 6½ furlong course. Ridden by Jockey L. Pikor, the ancient Cherokee gelding took the lead after 3 furlongs and simply galloped along in front. Warned Off was second and Canynge third, in the field of eight. The winner paid $5.

Justa Town, a son of the once great Jamestown, took the second race from Miss Adeline and Timber Lady. Jockey G. Bond made a good job of riding the winner and the colt paid a $10 mutuel.

Darling Pat Wins.

Darling Pat, to the tune of a $17.40 mutuel took the third event, leading most of the way under the handling of Apprentice J. Leonard. Hyph did a lot of chasing which netted second money. Mersan was third in the group of eight. Portever failed miserably in the role of favorite. Jockey Bond was thrown from Doreen during the running but escaped with a shaking up. The winner was a darling to those who had the tickets.

Nora's Grace, $5.30 favorite, did a lot of front running and won the fourth race. Jockey Ray Booker hustled the old mare every inch of the way and she led Oakurst to the wire by a length. Third money went to Star Magic.

My Sis gave the long-shot players a chance to howl in the sixth race, catching a tiring Clear Knight in the stretch to pay a $58.70 mutuel. Sea Finn was a distant third.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—JUSTA TOWN, $10.60, $4.00, $3.10; MISS ADELINE, $2.60, $2.30; TIMBER LADY, $2.70.

JUSTA TOWN, much the best, ran out at the paddock turn and then came with great rush last quarter to win going away. MISS ADELINE, forced wide at first turn, took command in stretch, but hung at end. TIMBER LADY, in trouble opening quarter, striking the fence twice the rest of the way home, was going gamely at end. SUN BELLE quit after showing early foot. Is sure to improve. LOU V, wheeled at break and trailed field thereafter.

THIRD RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $300; claiming. For maiden 3-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:24. Off at 3:28. Winner, A. Getz's ch. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—NORAS GRACE, $5.30, $3.40, $2.70; OAKHURST, $10.50, $4.60; STAR MAGIC, $3.40.

NORAS GRACE, exhibiting fine early speed, took command soon after the start, saved ground at the turns, but was driving to win from OAKHURST. Latter had excellent speed and should win next start. STAR MAGIC, hard urged from the break, had no excuses. AUPOIN, in thick of fight throughout, had no excuses. MARGE appears to be very partial to off track and wouldn't extend herself on fast track that prevailed.

FIFTH RACE—Five furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. The Williamsport. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:30. Off at 4:32. Winner, C. Beal's b. m. Two-dollar mutuels paid—MY SIS, $58.70, $26.20, $15.00; CLEAR KNIGHT, $12.80, $8.90; SEA FINN, $3.50.

MY SIS, benefited by bad start, dropped in behind the early pace made by CLEAR KNIGHT to the stretch turn, closed with a rush to win going away. CLEAR KNIGHT, away in motion, set fast pace, but hung in stretch. SEA FINN, victim of bad start, was put under pressure at once and closed gamely last half. HURDY GURDY broke well, but was in tight quarters first half. Closed well when clear. FLOWER TIME was victim of start, showed speed for half and then tired.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenths miles. Purse, $400; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:30. Off at 5:31. Winner, L. Siegert's ch. g. Dear Al:

Hagerstown, Md., May 27.

The stewards were ready to vent their wrath on Jockey Lou Pikor after today's second race. Lou had the mount on Timber Lady, one of the heavily played steeds in the 5-furlong race. He was seen to pull up at least once a furlong and, like the scribes, the stewards believed they had detected a rat on the track. However, Pikor came back with the evidence. His left boot was covered with whitewash off the fence. This fact bore out his contention that Timber Lady kept bearing into the rail and he was pulling up to keep from being thrown on his—sweet violets. All was forgiven after the boot had been exhibited. Timber Lady is the same filly that threw Jockey Johnny Shanks here last week and put him on the injured list for several days. The starting here for the past few days has been rather ragged, even after one takes into consideration the fact that the starter is dealing with a terrible class of horse flesh in most instances. At that, I haven't seen a getaway to equal that of the Kentucky Derby.

BILL.

First race—Scotty's Pride seems to have found a field that will bow to his brand of speed. Gets in with only steadying weight and I see no reason for mistakes. Hogarty would have to be dealt with should he see action. Magic Gift seems headed for the minor award.

Second race—Titian Kiddie, a winner on the mile tracks, may have had enough education on the turns here to be a threat. Gifted Lady's last was not true. A contender tomorrow. Abitibi might improve off that last.

Third race—If an apprentice rider can make Dr. Jillson show his speed we may cash a bet on the gray horse. Star Queen met interference when Coffman pulled up on Gentleman here last Saturday. Mint Bud raced very wide last out.

Fourth race—Stool Pigeon is last on the eligible list here, but would be a hard horse to beat if sent postward. Jilted has raced well here and will be prominent. Scotty Don is due respect in a field of this caliber.

Fifth race—Oakhurst was second today, beaten a length, despite a bad ride. A change in jockeys tomorrow may see this one taking a purse. Doeskin, a recent winner

McCarthy Shoots Record-Tying 69 in Rain for Kenwood Medal

Rutley Loses By 2 Strokes On 18th

Beaver Dam Star Is Only One in Field of 70 to Break Par.

By Dave Herman.

Martin F. McCarthy, Beaver Dam's "Iron Man," lived up to his reputation as an "all weather" golfer yesterday and shot a sensational record-tying 69 to win the medal in the qualifying round of the Kenwood Golf and Country Club invitation tournament.

Only man in a field of 70 able to crack par, McCarthy played like a Hagen on the first nine, shooting a 32 in the face of a driving rain, and finishing 3-3-4, 1 under, to beat out Ted Rutley, host club star, by 2 strokes for the coveted prize.

Oddly enough, it was Rutley who held the amateur course mark at Kenwood until the Beaver Dam fusilier came steaming over the stretch with his blast of pars and birdies.

Rutley Supplies Drama.

It was Rutley, however, who supplied whatever drama was injected into the qualifying proceedings. Playing an hour after McCarthy had wound up with his brilliant score, Rutley racked up enough pars and birdies to round the turn in 34. Standing on the eighteenth tee, the Kenwood ace needed his par 4 to tie McCarthy, a birdie, his specialty on the hole, to win the medal.

Rutley ploughed into his drive, and it settled in the rough; his second was still in the rough, and it was 4 before he reached the green. Two putts—and it was a sad 6 and 71.

With the title flight composed of 32, all of the headline golfers qualified safely. Levi Yoder, of Kenwood, and Ralph Quinter, the good looking Chevy Chase star, who won the Chevy invitation recently, fired 73's each. Undaunted by an outgoing nine of 39, Quinter shattered par on the incoming side for a 34.

Loyola Nine Defeats Georgetown Prep, 9-3

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Baltimore, Md., May 27.—The Loyola baseball team had two big scoring innings and it was more than enough to defeat Georgetown Prep of Washington, 9 to 3, here today.

Three successive errors made by the visitors in the first gave Loyola the lead.

Georgetown Prep came back to tally three in the third, but Scheidt's circuit clout with the sacks loaded in the fifth took the heart out of the visitors.

Law School Dominates G.W. Intramural Loop

Placing five men on the honor list, the law school team of George Washington University's intramural baseball league, garnered the lion's share of honors on the all-league squad selected yesterday. Four players from the medical school and three from engineering also were rewarded with sweaters and insignia.

Those honored include Vernon Stehman, medical school, voted the most valuable player, and John Theimyer, of the same team, adjudged the most capable manager. Others on the list are Charles Reynolds, Joe Girtler and Trueman Haskell, of engineering; Jack Embrey, Gaynor Britt, Jack Kelly, Alvin Corbin and Henry Marshall, law school; Joe Jones and Roland Brown, of medical school.

Marathon Here Draws Nation's Greatest

Place on 3-Man Olympic Team Goes to Winner of Run Saturday.

The National A. A. U. marathon championship, to be run here Saturday afternoon, will bring to the Capital the most brilliant collection of long-distance stars in the country for the gruelling struggle to be waged over the course stretching from Mount Vernon to the White House. The run is sponsored by the Star.

Headed by Pat Dengis, Baltimore's defending champion, more than 100 harriers of top ranking will fight it out for the crown and a place on the three-man marathon team now being selected to wear the red, white and blue shield of the United States in the Olympic games at Berlin.

Leslie Pawson, Mel Porter, Johnny Kelley, Bill McMahon, who with Dengis comprise the "Big Five" of distance racing in America; William Steiner, Albert "Whitey" Michelsen and many other recognized aces are to meet the champion in the 26 miles 385 yards yards grind.

N. B. C. to Broadcast It.

The race, regarded as the greatest ever arranged in the United States, is to start from Mount Vernon promptly at 2 o'clock and will end behind the White House at the Zero Milestone, where Dr. Hans Luther, German Ambassador to the United States, will greet the winner and present the championship trophy.

An international and a coast-to-coast hook-up arranged by N. B. C. will carry the presentation, a description of the late stages of the race by WMAL's Bill Coyle over this country and a speech by Dr. Luther on the Olympic games to listeners in Berlin.

Resettlement Swamps Bureau Nine by 23-0

The Resettlement Green Belts ran themselves dizzy yesterday on the Ellipse while smothering Bureau of Engraving under a 23-to-0 count in a Federal A League game. Leschinsky set the Engravers down with 3 hits and struck out 9 batsmen.

Rightfielder Hamel led the Green Belts' 20-hit attack with 5 hits—one of them a triple—in six trips to the plate. Lenox, Langley and Watts accounted for a home run each.

Mrs. Johnson Leads Star Tourney

Shooting the tough back nine in 39, a far cry from her dismal 48 of the outgoing side, Mrs. T. J. Johnson, tall Army and Navy Country Club golfer, took the lead at the half-way mark of the Star Cup tournament yesterday at Beaver Dam Country Club, carding a net of 73.

A 14-handicap player, Mrs. Johnson topped Mrs. McCook Knox, of Chevy Chase, who scored 93-14—79.

Mrs. Noble J. Waldron, of Beaver Dam, District first team captain, was next with 96-16—80.

Mrs. K. S. Giles, of Indian Spring, had an 81 net, and Mrs. H. M. Brundage, of Columbia; Mrs. Howard Simons, of Manor, and Mrs. J. Franklin Gross, of Columbia, scored 82s.

Third Quarter Steel Prices Rise $2 to $3

Output Well Maintained With Large Orders From Railroads.

New York, May 27.—"Price advances for third quarter have been announced by leading producers of semifinished steel, bars, plates and shapes, all grades of sheets and hot-rolled strip steel," Iron Age says in its weekly summary today. "The increase amounts to $2 a ton on all products except cold-finished carbon steel bars which will go up $3 a ton. Third quarter quotations on wire products, tubular goods, rails, track accessories and cold-rolled strip have not yet been named.

"Cold-rolled strip is slated for an advance of at least $2 a ton. Rails may be marked up to $40 a ton. Certain revisions are expected on merchant wire products, but pipe is not expected to be changed. Skelp has already been reaffirmed at $1.80 a pound, all basing points. Tin plate will not be changed in the midst of the canning season.

"The new schedules, which have been formally published by at least one important producer of steel, contain one important innovation in that all quotations and sales will be made f.o.b. place of delivery. Place of delivery is defined as the railroad freight station at or nearest the place at which the product is to be used. If the place of delivery is at a basing point a switching charge of 2½ cents a 100 pound is added to the base price to obtain the delivered price. Chicago and Gary are exceptions, the switching charge at those points being 3 cents a 100 pound. At other points of delivery, prices will be determined as under the code.

Output Maintained.

"Raw steel output is very well sustained, ingot production this week being off only half a point to 68 per cent of capacity. Operations are off slightly at Chicago, Philadelphia and Cleveland, but have gained at Buffalo and St. Louis and are unchanged at Pittsburgh and Wheeling.

"Automotive requirements are definitely declining, but are still substantial enough to maintain sheet and strip mill operations at a high rate. Freight car orders include 5,400 for the Chesapeake & Ohio, 500 for the Pere Marquette and 1,000 for the Norfolk & Western. The New Haven has bought 10 locomotives. The week's fabricated structural steel awards of 11,900 tons compare with 34,720 tons in the preceding period, but new projects increased from 10,865 tons to 27,400 tons."

Electrical Equipment Orders Rise Steadily

New York, May 27.—Orders for electric equipment have shown a virtually uninterrupted uptrend since the low of $57,897,333 in the first quarter of 1933.

New orders booked by 78 manufacturers during the first three months of 1936 totaled $153,452,432, against $121,814,226 in the corresponding 1935 period, a gain of 26 per cent, according to the Standard Statistics Co.

Wheeling Road To Pay Arrears Of $4,000,000

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, May 27.—Directors of the Wheeling & Lake Erie Railroad voted today payment of more than $4,000,000 in back dividends on prior lien stock, payable June 4.

Stockholders elected Frank E. Taplin, Warren Bicknell, G. A. Tomlinson, W. M. Duncan, jr., and George M. Jones to the board. The directors previously elected Charles S. Wachner and Robert Schaffner to fill vacancies.

Taplin interests, engaged with the Van Sweringen forces in a struggle for control, obtained six seats on the board of 15. Those aligned with Taplin are Jones, Wachner, Schaffner, Peirce Butler and E. J. Kulas.

Kulas was elected to the executive committee to succeed William Nash. The remainder of the committee and all officers were re-elected.

The back dividends amount to $35 a share. The prior lien shares are held by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation as collateral on a loan to the Nickel Plate Railroad.

Stockholders will meet June 29 to vote on a plan for recapitalization, submitted by Jesse Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

Montana Oil Well Tests 7,560 Bbls.

Marmarth, N. D., May 27 (AP).—Officials of the Montana-Dakota Utilities Corporation announced a well drilled 20 miles west of here in Montana came in today and tested 7,560 barrels of oil a day.

Other wells must be drilled this year under regulations set up by the Federal Government in developing this Federal oil reserve area.

Standard Oil Dividends 15% Over Last Year

Payments Estimated at $94,484,839 for First Six Months.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 27.—Aggregate cash dividend payments by the companies of the Standard Oil group in the first half of 1936 are estimated at $94,484,839, compared with $81,944,223 in the first half of 1935, an increase of approximately 15 per cent, and the largest for any similar period since 1931, according to figures compiled by a local investment house.

Total disbursements for the second quarter are estimated at $74,552,751, compared with $63,821,486 in the second quarter of 1935, while first quarter payments this year totaled $19,932,088, compared with $18,122,737 in the corresponding quarter of last year. The large difference between first and second quarter payments reflects the fact that several of the larger members of the group are on a semiannual dividend basis with payments being made in the second and fourth quarters.

Increased payments by Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey, Standard Oil Co. of Indiana, Standard Oil Co. of California, Ohio Oil Co., South Penn Oil Co., South West Pennsylvania Pipe Line and Indiana Pipe Line Co., account for the larger aggregate disbursements this quarter, when compared with the corresponding period of last year.

Texas Corp. Plans $60,000,000 Issue

New York, May 28 (AP).—The Texas Corporation is about to register with the Securities and Exchange Commission an issue of $60,000,000 of 3½ per cent 15-year debentures, it was disclosed at the offices of the company today.

The bonds, which will be sold to refund about $60,000,000 of presently outstanding 5 per cent debentures, will be offered by a banking group headed by Dillon Read & Co.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively, A Special Correspondent.

Stock Prices Continue to Recover in More Active Trading; Rail Bonds Turn Upward.

New York, May 27.—Stocks could not keep up the fast pace of the closing yesterday, but turnover was the largest in two weeks, at about 1,250,000 shares, and prices advanced to new limits for the present movement. Railroad bonds crept up, but the Government list was indifferent. Grains were again lower. September wheat fell ⅜ of a cent to 83⅝ cents a bushel.

Stocks escaped their usual morning nap, thanks to the brisk rally in the last hour yesterday. Speculative imagination was stimulated at the discovery that many selling orders placed above the market had been removed and that, temporarily at least, prices were easier to put up than to put down. After early gains the buying enthusiasm was dampened somewhat by renewed profit taking and the market coasted through the middle watches without much change in price and without great activity.

Probably the spurt in stocks gave rise to more and better rumors that caused the strength. Wistful thinking seemed to be responsible chiefly for the revival of the report that, owing to strong representations of the stock exchange, the Federal Reserve Board would relent and reduce margin requirements. In most well informed quarters, nevertheless, no help in that direction is expected. Another reason assigned for the improvement was that the tide in pessimism over the election has now turned. Wall Street is, they say, once more gaining hope that the New Dealers can be overthrown in November. This summer, say some of the more enthusiastic of the optimists, we are going to have another Republican stock market.

Trade News Favorable.

Stocks had something more tangible than hopes of better political times to encourage them. Midweek trade news was good. Railroad freight car loadings last week, according to reports of the larger roads, ran about 14 per cent ahead of the corresponding period of last year and were a little better than for the preceding week. Much the same record was shown for electricity production. The steel trade reviews told of well sustained demand, although the usual seasonal decline in automotive requirements is being felt. Optimism on third quarter is indicated by higher prices posted by a leading company.

Meanwhile additional reports on railroad earnings for April sustain the improvement shown by the first statements. The first 51 roads to report show an increase of 23½ per cent in net operating income, which means that the roads as a whole may soon be "out of the red." Trading in railroad stocks was less active than it was yesterday, but rail bonds felt a buying wave.

Tax Uncertainty.

Another reversal on the tax measure did not appear to have much effect on the market. Undoubtedly markets would be stronger if uncertainty were removed, but while the tax cloud hangs over them the threatened deluge has not succeeded in stopping all activity. Wall Street feels that an undistributed profits tax would be bad, but it does not yet concede that such measure will become law.

Along with the extension of the railroad share gains, the steel group hardened. U. S. Steel reached its best price of the month in rallying a point on the largest turnover in the list. Youngstown stood out with a rise of more than 4 points. Other steels advanced fractionally. The best rails were Pennsylvania, Great Northern, Southern Pacific and Southern Railway. Norfolk & Western made a new high.

Mail orders were strong on large volume, with Sears at a new top. A good demand was felt for the rail equipments and the motor accessories. Baldwin was a favorite. Motor shares recovered early fractional losses. Chemicals were mixed. Allied spurted 4 points. Utilities turned irregular. Some of the preferred issues rose 1 to 3 points.

Special movements were conducted in Hercules Powder, which jumped more than 3 points on the dividend increase; Connecticut Railway & Lighting common and preferred, American Power & Light preferred, responding to larger dividends; Louisiana Oil preferred, which sank more than 3 points; the Schulte issues, continuing to recede, and Industrial Alcohol, consistently weak for the past several days.

Tax Guessing.

Much useless labor has been done in brokerage houses since Congress began to tinker with a new tax bill. Lists of corporations were drawn up by brokerage house analysts, first to show the percentages of earnings paid in dividends; next to show how earnings would be affected by an 18 per cent rate. Now, after the Senate's one-day honeymoon with the higher income rate, it is reported that a return will be made to the original Roosevelt plan of a heavy penalty tax on undistributed corporation earnings. The evils in that system were clearly brought out in testimony before the Senate committee, but it now has the inside track. Wall Street might as well wait a while before trying to pick the stocks which will be helped or harmed by new taxes. In the long run all will be damaged, as well as individuals.

Consolidations.

Apropos the revelations now being made on the forces working in favor of the so-called Prince plan of railroad consolidation and of the dismemberment of the bankrupt Minneapolis & St. Louis, the Prince plan never had much support in Wall Street. It was regarded as too grandiose ever to be practicable, if indeed it promised any advantages in the first place, beyond a possible domination by one or two large systems. As for the St. Louis, that road seems clearly to belong to the bondholders, who ought to be allowed to dispose of it as they see fit. It has been in receivership too long for the common stockholders to hope to get anywhere.

Still Independent.

Public Service Corporation of New Jersey reaffirms its freedom from control in the annual report to the SEC. Although United Gas Improvement increased its percentage of voting power in the company from 27.86 per cent to 28.46 per cent in 1935, and United Corporation, which has a substantial amount of U.G.I., increased its Public Service interest from 13.58 to 13.87 per cent, Public Service maintained that "in fact such companies do not have effective control of registrant." One thing of which it was not sure was the family relationship to certain companies that had been leased and assigned to Public Service Electric & Gas.

Proper Volume.

Wall Street hears that some of its good friends at Washington, who advise the Federal Reserve Board, feel that a daily turnover of half a million shares is sufficient for all legitimate needs. Brokers won't agree with that, nor will many other independent observers of the market. The volume may be enough to settle investment dealings, but it has been amply demonstrated lately that it is by no means sufficient to provide good enough markets to give industry much assistance. What the investor wants is an active market, with bid and offering prices close together, so that when he does wish to buy or sell, he can do so without putting up or forcing down the market several points. The spectacular is needed in order to give the investor a market, if for no other reason. A half million share market would mean radical reorganization in Wall Street, but it is doubtful if the Federal Reserve Board has taken the unshakable view that such a volume is consistent with business recovery.

Bankers' Party Of 225 Entrain For Convention

Led by their president, Charles H. Doing, members of the District Bankers Association left late yesterday aboard a special train for the eighteenth annual convention at White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., which opens this morning. There were 225 persons in the party, including wives and other family members.

Speakers at the opeing session of the three-day conclave will be Robert V. Fleming, president of Riggs National Bank and of the American Bankers Association; J. Harvie Wilkinson, of Richmond; Charles H. McComas, of Baltimore, and Mr. Doing.

"Bonds in a Bank's Portfolio" is the subect of Mr. Wilkinson, who is vice president of the State Planters Bank & Trust Co., while "Some Aspects of Banking and Suretyships" will be discussed by Mr. McComas, representing the Fidelity & Deposit Co. of Maryland.

Committee reports will be presented by Norman E. Towson and Lanier P. McLachlen. The Right Rev. Arthur C. Thomson, bishop of Southern Virginia, will pronounce the invocation.

New York, May 27.—American Safety Razor Corporation has declared a quarterly dividend of $1.50 per share on the no-par value capital stock, payable on June 30, to stockholders of record June 10. is the fifty-first consecutive cash dividend.

Fenner & Beane Survey Covers 28 Industries

A survey of the position and prospects of 28 industries, prepared by the Fenner & Beane Industries Service, shows that on the basis of facts now available, the building supply and industrial machinery industries appear currently to have the most favorable long-term prospects of any of the 28 industries reviewed.

Existing housing shortages in a number of localities, rising rents and realty vaules, and an ample supply of low-cost mortgage money under the Federal Housing Act, are the reasons for anticipating a large increase in residential activity, the service states.

Chain Store Sales At Year's High Level

New York, May 27.—Chain store trade forged ahead in April and well sustained gains throughout the month were reported from all important business centers, according to the current review of Chain Store Age.

"Total volume rose to the highest level for the current year," Chain Store Age points out, "and was also the best from the standpoint of comparison with a year ago. Conspicuously good showings were made by the grocery and drug chain groups, sales of which were the largest for the month in several years."

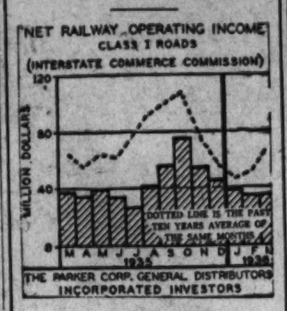
Railway Net Gains 21% in Quarter



Boston, Mass., May 27.—Flood conditions in March cut down car loadings. This affected March net railway operating income which did not increase according to the seasonal trend. During the first quarter of this year, however, net operating income passed the same months of last year by 21 per cent on only a 13 per cent increase in gross.

Cotton Broker Fails to Meet Exchange Debt

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 27.—The New York Cotton Exchange announced today the failure of William B. Averell, a prominent member of the exchange. In a letter to the president of the exchange, Averall, who has been a member since April, 1911, said "I regret to announce my inability to meet my financial obligations."

In cotton circles, where Averell was known as one of the largest ness, his failure was described as ness, his failure was described as "one of the biggest shocks the exchange ever had."

The blow to cotton circles was largely psychological, however, and prices were not disturbed by the announcement.

Well known in New York social circles and in the cotton trade, Averell was said to have carried some of the heaviest commitments ever seen on the cotton exchange at one time. After the announcement the cotton market continued to rule somewhat higher at gains of about 10 to 20 cents a bale.

Averell, who was an independent floor broker and not a member of any firm, was said in trade circles in former days to have been also a heavy trader in stocks.

Western Roads Expect 10% Gain in Travel

Chicago, May 27 (AP).—Estimates of a 10 per cent gain in vacation travel this summer over 1935 were made by the Western Association of Railway Executives today on the basis of advance bookings. Some of the reporting roads said bookings were increased as much as 40 per cent over a year ago.

H. W. Siddall, chairman of the Western Passenger Association, said 1936 probably would see the Western roads gaining 20 per cent in passenger business. He said the advance started in 1933, soon after the rails in this section reduced rates.

Wheat Market Steady After Squeeze Flurry

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, May 27.—Wheat rose about a cent a bushel today, but afterward, largely because of profit taking, receded in the final transactions, and ended with moderate losses.

Signalizing a return to normal conditions in the wheat pit was total absence of the hysterical sweeping price changes and big rush of trdaing that accompanied the windup yesterday of dealings in old crop futures.

Wheat closed easy, ⅛@⅝ under yesterday's finish; July, 83⅝@83¾; September, 83½@83⅝; December, 85⅜@83½; corn, ¼ to 1 cent up; July, 60⅛@60¼; September, 57⅝@57¾; December, 52⅝; oats, at ⅛ decline to ⅛ advance; July, 24⅜, and rye showing ¼@⅜ zain; July, 53. In provisions, the outcome was 2 cents to 12 cents higher.

The Federal Diary

Registered in U. S. Patent Office.

By Morgan Baker.

Thomas E. Lyons, executive secretary of the Foreign Trade Zones Board, has returned from an official trip to California, where he encountered considerable foreign trade interest.

BAKER.

Harry A. Curtis (F), Tennessee Valley Authority, has just patented a process for agglomerating fine phosphate rock for use as a constituent of reduction furnace charging stock.

Dr. Carrolly Fox, medical director of the United States Quarantine Station at Rosebank, Staten Island, who died Sunday in New York at the age of 61, had a record of 37 years of service with the Public Health Service. He had had assignments in Alaska, Washington State, Los Angeles and the Philippines.

Another new local has been chartered by the National Federation of Federal Employes, according to Gertrude McNally, national secretary-treasurer. The new unit is No. 563 at Fort Thomas, Ky., and is composed of CCC workers.

I. C. C. "30-Year Club."

Members added to the "30-Year Club" at Interstate Commerce Commission include the following who entered service in 1906:

Examiner R. G. Taylor (F), Bureau of Formal Cases; P. E. Huettner (P), chief, Freight Tariff Branch; Director W. P. Bartel (C), Bureau of Service, and J. Stanley Payne, senior assistant chief counsel, Bureau of Law.

Bureau of Motor Carriers.

Mabel Gregg (P), formerly with Agriculture; James Salter, Helen Creagan (C), formerly with War; Edward Biggins, formerly with Internal Revenue; Virginia Sprecker, Stenographic Pool; Ruth Telfer, C. C. C.; Janice Hutchinson, Labor; Charles Sundstrom, Internal Revenue; Fern Calvert, Commerce, and Gussie Hartman.

Resettlement employes will hear David J. Saposs, chief economist for the National Labor Relations Board, speak on "Organizing the White-Collar Worker," at a meeting tonight at 1328 G street northwest, under auspices of Resettlement Lodge, No. 206, A. F. G. E.

Capt. O'Connell Retires.

Capt. Daniel C. O'Connell, National Park Service, will be honored by his fellow employes upon his retirement this month. Under direction of Gertrude Rest, Division of Operations, room 104, Agriculture, a purse is being collected for presentation to Capt. O'Connell, who has a wide circle of friends at Agriculture, where he was stationed.

Civil Service Spreads.

Immediate installation of a merit system in Michigan State prisons has been ordered by Gov. Fitzgerald, who said in his order:

"Political influence in the appointment of prison workers, particularly guards, must be eliminated, not only in the public interest, but for the welfare of the inmates as well."

Uniformed firemen in Highland Park and Wyandotte, Mich., also have been included under Civil Service by election. Employes of all departments of Saginaw are scheduled for Civil Service and the move has spread to Kalamazoo.

Diary Guest Tickets.

If F, P or C follows your name in this column call in person on the Federal Diary editor today only between 3:30 and 5 p. m. You will receive tickets to one of the following Loew's theaters: F, Loew's Fox (stage, Gertrude Niessen, the Elida Ballet and other acts; screen, Francis Lederer in "One Rainy Afternoon") or to P, Loew's Palace (second week of Janet Gaynor and Robert Taylor in "Small Town Girl"); or to C, Loew's Columbia (Paul Cavanaugh in "Champagne Charlie").

Members of Treasury Local, No. 262, N. F. F. E., are sponsoring a two-day all-expense bus trip this week-end over the Skyline drive, visiting the Natural Bridge of Virginia and the Endless Caverns.

Splendid Record Made.

An enviable record of service is left by I. P. Disney, examiner of interferences, who has just retired from Patent Office. A native of Baltimore, Mr. Disney was educated in the public schools of that city. In 1888 he was graduated from Cornell University with an M. E. degree. He later attended law school in Baltimore and was there admitted to the bar. Following this he was for a time employed in electric motor and cable work.

Mr. Disney entered the Patent Office on February 1, 1890, and was promoted through the various grades by competitive examination, being a principal examiner on July 1, 1907. He had charge of Divisions 11, 40, 42 and 43 and was appointed law examiner on October 23, 1919, and examiner of interferences July 15, 1930, which position he has held since that time.

General Land Office employes will bid bon voyage soon to Georgia M. Rhoades and Grace Hudson as they sail for a tour of England and several countries on the Continent. Miss Rhoades is secretary of the G. L. O. Lodge, No. 153, A. F. G. E.

Purchases by WPA.

Q. Are purchases by the WPA made through the Treasury? Mrs. A. W. Muntz (F).

A. WPA purchases are made through the Procurement Division, Treasury. WPA administrator, Harry L. Hopkins, announced recently that this Administration had spent $120,987,953 for materials and supplies since last September, or about $500,000 a day, not including materials bought by other Government agencies participating in the WPA program.

Issue by Beatrice Creamery

The New York Stock Exchange has received a notice from the Beatrice Creamery Co. of the proposed creation of 100,000 shares of $5 cumulative preferred stock of no par value.

Culbertson On Bridge

Clumsy Signals.

The fact that many inexpert players use signal cards as though they were bludgeons (instead of the rapier-like weapons they really should be) can be put to great advantage by an observant declarer. The only point to be determined is the truthfulness of the signaler. In the case of stolid, unimaginative players, this may be taken for granted. Obviously the consistent falsecarder is just as easy to analyze. In bridge, as in warfare, there must be feints and parries. Once the enemy can depend on a never varying form of attack, defensive measures become greatly simplified. In today's hand, East shouted for a heart lead. His partner heard him, but could do nothing about it. The declarer heard him, too, and did plenty!

South, dealer.

SOUTH

♦ A J 4
♣ 7 2

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 spade	Pass	4 spades	Pass
Pass	Pass

North's pre-emptive raise probably was the best bid at his command, although it was slightly shaded from a distributional standpoint. In the Culbertson system such a raise should be based on one to one and one-half honor tricks, five trumps, and a singleton in some suit.

West opened the club king and declarer dropped the seven on the trick. The club queen followed and then, not knowing which of dummy's red kings to lead through, West continued with a low club lead which declarer ruffed.

Two rounds of trumps were played, on the second of which East planked down the nine of hearts with great gusto. Declarer stopped for a moment to think things over. He knew East to be a player who probably never had given a false signal in his life. It was inconceivable that he would be signaling for a heart lead if he held only the ace over dummy's king-jack. Such a play simply would take the guess out of the heart situation if declarer lacked the queen. He must, therefore, have both the ace and queen, and two heart tricks would be lost by declarer leading the suit.

On this reasoning, declarer determined to avoid leading hearts and to try for a diamond finesse instead. It is true that this plan of play, if unsuccessful, would be penalized an extra trick, but that was small on an undoubted contract as compared to the chance for game.

The four of diamonds to the king and a finesse of the jack on the diamond return did the trick. Now the ace lead permitted the discard of one of dummy's hearts, and cut the losing trick total to three.

Without East's violent signal, declarer undoubtedly would have tried for the one heart trick that would make his contract safe. Far from calling for a heart lead, East should have discarded his lowest heart in an attempt to lure declarer to his own destruction.

Bootlegger Admits Killing U.S. Agent

Hammond, Ind., May 27 (U.P.).—Harlan Crouch, 43-year-old rum runner and expert marksman, who today confessed the slaying of Federal Alcholic Investigator John R. Foster, waived preliminary hearing at his arraignment tonight and was ordered held to the Federal grand jury without bail.

The weeping and disheveled prisoner, who broke under questioning of Federal agents at Indianapolis this afternoon, was rushed here, under a convoy of 25 agents and arraigned immediately before United States Commissioner Schuyler C. Dwyer.

Crouch was captured in an Indianapolis apartment this morning on an anonymous tip. He had been in hiding since Foster was slain May 14, when he and a companion attempted to pursue Crouch and Jacobs as they sped out of Hammond with a carload of illicit alcohol.

Rev. J. L. Shaw Outlines Adventists' Progress

While lack of funds has caused numerous other denominations to withdraw missionaries from foreign lands, the General Conference of Seventh Day Adventists has held its workers in their far-flung posts, the Rev. J. L. Shaw, treasurer of the conference in Takoma Park, reported yesterday at the forty-third session of the sect, now assembled in San Francisco.

Dr. Shaw said the reasons why missionary work has gone ahead among the Adventists were adherence to the Bible, loyalty of church members and "the spirit of sacrifice and devotion of ministers, evangelists, Bible workers, physicians, nurses and every class connected with our denominational activities."

Employes Federation Charters New Local

Chartering of another local union of the National Federation of Federal Employes was announced yesterday by Secretary-Treasurer Gertrude M. McNally.

Newest link in the chain of National Federation locals is No. 563 at Fort Thomas, Ky. It is composed entirely of employes of the CCC Corps, and 50 names appeared on the original application for charter. Maj. Kelly H. Lewis has been elected president of the group.

FTC Stock Data Held Falsified; Three Indicted

Capital Lawyer Involved; Grand Jury Returns 51 True Bills.

Charged with conspiring to violate the Securities Act of 1933 in connection with registration of the Continental Distillers & Importers Corporation, three men, one of them a Washington lawyer, were indicted by the District grand jury yesterday.

They were Dan F. Reynolds, member of a local law firm, Harry E. Hanes, general manager of the Standard Appraisal Co., New York, and Milton Janis, salesman for a New York stock underwriting firm. Officials asserted some $40,000 in stock of the corporation was sold, although it never began operation.

In all, the grand jury yesterday voted 51 indictments, one charging Carl R. Loveridge, 29, with the slaying of Jessie E. Posey, 24, 244 Ninth stret southeast. Loveridge, a cab driver, shot and killed Miss Posey, who had spurned him attentions, May 1, when he discovered her returning home accompanied by another man.

Those indicted were: Claude Summers and Charles Summers, joy-riding; James Mason, Leroy Mason, John T. Kidd, Charles R. Sangster, Darnell Kinnard, Nathan Strong and Roger C. Hammond, housebreaking; Freddie Washington, and Odell Leftwich, grand larceny; John Komlos, embezzlement and grand larceny; David Weathers, Isaac Weathers, Joseph Jones and Charlie Miller, grand larceny and larceny after trust.

Charles L. Flynn, James P. Kane, Mary Jones, Raymond Jones, Roger Simkins, Rudolph Johnson, Zadia A. Ridley, Evelyn B. Hughes, Edith C. Perkins, Siki Jackson, Shermont Jackson, Henry Jackson, Horace Nelson, Earle Frazier, Parthenia Adams, Josephine Elizabeth Allen, Olivia Mason, Bula Parker, Marian Samuels, M. Lucille Smallwood and Mildred Terry, gaming charges.

Etta Logan, violation of section 73, title 18, U. S. Code; Marvin Collins, false pretenses; Dan F. Reynolds, Harry E. Hanes and Milton Janis, violation of section 88m, title 18, U. S. Code.

Rebecca T. Jones, manslaughter; Leroy Legrett, Lelen E. Stolaman and Carl R. Loveridge, first-degree murder, and Octavia B. Turner, forgery and uttering.

Those against whom the grand jury ignored charges were Charles C. Early, Robert L. Pritchard and Alfred W. Manning, violation of section 860, D. C. Code; George Drost, Rupert J. McCormick, Leila McCormick, Alexander Davis and Ione May, robbery.

$1,000,000 Legal Fees Passed in Reynolds' Case

Winston-Salem, N. C., May 27 (AP). A fee of more than $1,000,000 was approved in Forsyth County Superior Court today for the three attorneys who represented the infant son of Libby Holman Reynolds in litigation over settlement of the $28,000,000 estate of his late father, Z. Smith Reynolds, tobacco heir.

The Brookhart children had been spending the day at nursery school. The accident occurred just as children at the school were being dismissed.

Six Hurt in Collision.

Six persons were injured in an automobile accident near Arcturus, on the Mount Vernon Memorial highway, early yesterday. Three of the injured are under treatment in the Alexandria Hospital, while one is in Emergency Hospital here.

A car driven by Mrs. George W. Parker, of Arcturus, and occupied by her daughter, Miss Mayme Parker, and Mr. and Mrs. Frank McKenzie, of 1475 Columbia road northwest, was making a left turn when, according to park police, it was in collision with a machine driven by Jack Nichols, 29, of 730 Shepherd street northwest, who had as a passenger Miss Patricia Jackson, of 1232 Rhode Island avenue northwest.

The Parker car was overturned. The occupants were taken to the Alexandria Hospital. Miss Parker escaped with bruises, and left the hospital after receiving treatment. Her mother suffered fractures of an ankle and one arm; McKenzie is under treatment for lacerations of the scalp and face, and other minor injuries, and Mrs. McKenzie is similarly injured. The condition of all three was reported as favorable.

Liner Leaves Cherbourg.

Cherbourg, France, May 28 (Thursday) (AP).—Britain's new pride of the sea, the liner Queen Mary, sailed for New York early today on her maiden voyage across the Atlantic.

Many additional passengers were taken on here, including 120 who arrived on the boat train from Paris at about the time the Queen Mary arrived at 9 p. m.

Many visitors from the French capital, including a number of Americans, came to Cherbourg to view the new vessel.

Miss Rohanna Siegel, of Hampstead, London, remained aboard when visitors left the ship at Southampton, according to a radio message from the ship. It reported she mingled with the passengers, taking tea in the lounge.

"I was determined to get to New York," she was quoted as saying when she was landed as the liner made its first stop en route to New York. "But somehow I became worried and asked for advice."

Typewriter Co. Workers to Get Guard of Police

By the Associated Press.

Syracuse, N. Y., May 27.—Police officials made plans to throw a guard of 80 policemen around the Remington-Rand Co.'s Syracuse plant tomorrow, scheduled to open in the face of certain picketing by more than 1,000 striking employes.

Chief of Police Thomas Carroll said, "I don't anticipate any disorder, but I'm going to have enough men there to assure anyone who wants to go to work that they can go to work unmolested."

Announcement that the plant would be reopened came from Mayor Rolland B. Marvin after a conference with James H. Rand, president of the company, and company officials nl New York City.

At Marietta, Ohio, striking employes of the Remington-Rand plant ignored an invitation to return to work, and Supt. Walter E. Gebhart said he would repeat the offer tomorrow morning.

Home Attacked.

Portsmouth, Ohio, May 27 (AP).—Both factions involved in the Wheeling Steel Corporation strike today denied responsibility for an early-morning attack on the home of a steel worker in which shots fired from an automobile narrowly missed the man's wife and child.

Mrs. Oscar Cropper reported to police that shotgun charges shattered a window in her home as she and one of her four children looked out the window. The shots, she said, came from an automobile in the street. She and the child were unhurt.

Her husband is an employe of the steel plant where 5,500 workers have been idle since last Friday because of the strike.

One man has been beaten severely and a score of others slightly injured since the strike began.

Nearly 200 company police and office workers remained inside the plant today. Most of them have been within the picket-guarded area since Friday.

600 Drivers Strike.

Dallas, May 27 (AP).—Two passengers were pulled from taxis and police patroled taxi company offices today as 600 striking cab drivers and the operators deadlocked in a wage dispute—with the visitor-drawing Texas Centennial just around the corner.

The men asked for a wage of 33 1-3 per cent of their cabs' gross receipts. They have been allowed 25 per cent.

Covers 17 States.

Labor leaders estimated more than 46,000 industrial and agricultural workers were participating in strikes which affected 17 States.

There were few instances of trouble.

At Cambridge, Mass., Miss Vera Dupont, first cousin of Pierre Dupont, the manufacturer, and Mrs. George Burroughs, first cousin of the late President Coolidge, picketed with striking truck drivers.

Flying squadrons were organized in New York by the barbers union in an effort to get members to join a strike, which union leaders said already involved 7,500 barbers.

New York police drove away six striking seamen who attempted to picket the home of Mayor F. H. LaGuardia. They also dispersed a picket line on the Panama Pacific Line pier.
